BECKWITH RESIGNS AS SECRETARY

George D. Beckwith Has Been the Efficient Head of the Local Y. M. C. A. for the Past Five Years—Will Take up Association Work in Another Field.

George D. Beckwith, general secretary of the local Y. M. C. A., resigned as secretary at the meeting of the board of directors of the association on Monday evening, to take up association work in another field which has not been decided upon as yet. His resignation was accepted with regret. Secretary Beckwith has been associated with the local Y. M. C. A. work for the past five years.

Mr. Beckwith in 1909 graduated from the Syracuse University with the degree of P. H. D., and went to Chicago as social director of the Chicago Central Y. M. C. A., where he

CYCLONE DAMAGE IN TENNESSEE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Memphis, Tenn., May 30.—Three persons are reported killed, fifty-three injured and property amounting to thousands of dollars destroyed this morning when a cyclone of great intensity passed over a territory covering one hundred miles about Memphis.

Great damage resulted in Memphis. Practically every electric sign in the city was wrecked, many homes were damaged by falling trees and several houses were unroofed.

The big towboat J. W. Finley, which had tied up opposite Memphis for the night, was torn from her moorings, blown across the river and left high and dry on a sand bar. Her tow of 16 boats loaded with coal were floated down the river and sank. The storm lasted for twenty minutes.

Reports from Mattoon, Little Rock, Earl and dozens of cities in Arkansas, Mississippi and Alabama tell of serious damage to crops and houses and stock. At one time the velocity of the wind was 125 miles an hour.

COINS WILL TEACH PREPAREDNESS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, May 30.—Preparedness coins, the first ever struck, will go into circulation in the United States shortly after July 1, next. Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo today announced the forthcoming advent of the new coins, stating that they are "intended to typify in a measure the awakening of the country in its own protection." The new preparedness coins will be 25 cent pieces and will appear with newly designed coins of the ten cent and half dollar denominations. These new designs for fractional silver are to be adopted in accordance with law which permits such alterations every quarter of a century. Twenty-five years have elapsed since the last change.

The preparedness quarter will show on the obverse side a figure of "Liberty" stepping forward to the gateway of the country, with left arm upraised in defense and on the arm a shield.

"The whole attitude is one of defense. In the right hand is an olive branch and the words 'Liberty' and 'Justice Under Law' are inscribed on the left hand." On the reverse side is an American eagle in full flight.

The new half dollar will show a full length Liberty bearing the American flag and carrying laurel and oak branches on one side and an eagle, perched on a crag with spread wings on the other. A mountain pine sapling, growing from the rock also is on the reverse side. The inscription "In God We Trust" also appears. The design shows a new profile of "Liberty" on the obverse and on the reverse a fasces, or bundle of rods fastened together symbolizing the strength that lies in unity. Olive branches surround the fasces.

The new half dollar and dime were designed by Adolph A. Weinman, a pupil of St. Gaudens, and the designer of the facade of the municipal building in New York city, the Union Soldiers' Sailors' monument in Baltimore and other works.

The preparedness quarter was designed by Herman A. McNell, the sculptor of the McKinley monument at Columbus, O. The new coins will be struck under the direction of Robert W. Woolley, director of the mint. Before the designs were adopted they were submitted to the Fine Arts Commission which ratified them. The accepted designs were chosen from more than fifty models submitted by several sculptors commissioned by Secretary McAdoo to submit suggestions.

The changing of both sides of the coins is an innovation, it having been the custom heretofore to alter but one side. Secretary McAdoo said today that he hopes the new design on the half dollar will popularize that coin as it has been gradually going out of use during recent years.

St. Paul, May 30.—The great home of James J. Hill overlooking a section of the city, was thrown open here today while thousands of persons, employees and friends of the late "Empire Builder" viewed the dead. The funeral tomorrow afternoon will be marked with the simplicity that made "Jim" Hill beloved in the great northwest. It will be public. From 2 p. m. until 2:05 p. m., all traffic on all lines, boat and rail, identified with the Hill interests will be stopped as tribute to the builder. All the building lines in the city will close at 2:30.

MEMORIAL DAY 1916.

ANTI-AMERICAN FEELING STIMULATED

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Columbus, N. M., May 30.—Anti-American feeling in the region of Casas Grandes is assuming troublesome proportions, it is stated in official dispatches.

Brig. General John J. Pershing, commander of the American forces in Mexico, is taking precautionary measures. A large amount of shrapnel is being concentrated at Casas Grandes.

The high tension existing between Carranza soldiers and the United States troops has threatened for some time to lead to serious consequences although it is hoped that the new attitude adopted by General Venustiano Carranza may clear the atmosphere and bring about better relations.

According to advices from Mexico City, Carranza has accepted the American position in Mexico and has withdrawn his latest protest. It is estimated that there are about 8,000 Carranza troops in lower Chihuahua. These soldiers as well as troops in Sonora are engaged in movements which are puzzling the United States military authorities.

General P. Elias Calles, the military governor of Sonora, now has about 20,000 men in his command. He is moving about ten thousand Mexicans and Yaqui Indian troops to the border ostensibly to prevent an uprising by the rebellious Yaqui Indians living in that region. However, it was reported some time ago that the uprising of the Indians has been crushed out which gives a touch of mystery to the present movement of Mexican troops.

Hitchcock, former postmaster general, who is heading the Hugheses as to whether he would accept the Republican nomination for the presidency if it were offered to him. Through his secretary, Justice Hughes declined to comment upon Mr. Hitchcock's assertion that "I am confident Justice Hughes will accept the Republican nomination for the presidency if it is offered to him." "There will be no comment," Justice Hughes' secretary said.

Shortly after six o'clock this morning the team of horses owned by Morris Miller, the downtown baker, ran away on Foxhall avenue and turned the corner into Hasbrouck avenue where they ran up to the sidewalk demolishing a newly erected fence alongside of Richard Kelsch's saloon. As the fence broke the team was attached to the baker wagon also gave way and the horses freed from the risk dashed on down the street and turned finally into Broadway where they were caught.

AUTOMOBILE RACE AT INDIANAPOLIS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Indianapolis, May 30.—After a night of uncertainty today dawned ideal for running off the seventh annual 200 mile Decoration Day sweepstakes for automobiles at the Speedway. A thin film of clouds hung across the sky, through which the sun was trying to break. The air was crisp with coolness.

Twenty-two of the fastest speed creations in the world, representing the brain and brawn of three nations, will face the starter at 1:30 o'clock. Of these Dario Resta in a Peugeot is favorite. Hoosiers were recalling today thrilling duel in which he engaged Ralph de Palma here last year.

Today's race is more than a contest of speed. It is a contest of brains and nerve. Drivers cannot drive with the throttle wide open on the brick course here as they do on the wood tracks of New York and Chicago. And accidents are more probable. The track is slightly slippery from the rains of yesterday, which the coolness of last night and today has failed to remedy.

Chief hopes for an American-made car winning the event lies with Eddie Rickenbacker, in a Maxwell, and "Howdy" Wilcox and Tom Rooney in Pintos. Against these Yankee cars are the best of Europe's offerings—Peugeots, Delages and Sunbeams, all with master drivers.

Christiania, May 30.—Norway is sending 4,000 tons of grain to Poland and other Scandinavian countries are expected to follow a like example in relieving the acute distress which now prevails in Poland. Conditions in Poland have recently reached the climax of their seriousness as a result of the non-arrival of food which had been promised by the American committee.

Newmarket, Eng., May 30.—E. Hulton's Fifiella, an outsider, won the Derby today. The favorite, Kwanaku, finished second. Nassorian, the only American entry in the classic, ran third. Kwanaku is owned by A. Fairlie and Nassorian is the property of John Sanford. Despite the war the race attracted widespread attention and there was an enormous crowd at the track.

Amsterdam, May 30.—Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German chancellor, is preparing to visit South Germany to sound public opinion on peace. Despite efforts of the German government to hide it some of the states are openly showing dissatisfaction over the domineering methods of the Prussian government. This feeling is especially marked in Dresden, Stuttgart and Munich.

TO FORM COURT OF ORDER OF AMARANTH

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

There will be a meeting of unusual interest to the members of the Order of the Eastern Star and the Masonic Fraternity on the evening of Wednesday, May 31, at the Masonic Temple, corner of Broadway and the Strand, at which time Mystic Court, W. D., Order of the Amaranth will be instituted by Mrs. Amelia E. MacNair of Brooklyn, N. Y., the Grand Royal Matron and Charles H. McNary of Albany, N. Y., the Grand Royal Patron, together with a large delegation of officers of the grand court from various parts of the state. This flourishing order has been not been represented heretofore in our city where there are so many members of the two first mentioned fraternities from whom the Amaranth draws its members only.

The society known as the Order of the Amaranth was first organized by Robert Macoy and other of the O. E. S. and F. and A. M. in the city of Brooklyn in 1873. Wyona No. 1 was the first court, and today our country is dotted with its courts from Maine to Texas and from far north Vancouver to lower California. Its names represents an "Everlasting flower," its government is vested in a supreme council and grand courts, the former being composed of a certain number of the highest officers of all the latter, holding its annual assembly whenever decided by the action of the preceding one—last year in San Francisco—this year in Minneapolis, Minn. The objects of the Amaranth are charitable and fraternal only. It is not as some suppose of a beneficiary nature. The present Grand Royal Matron of the state, Honored Lady, Amelia E. MacNair, has already made many strong friends in our city and for Mystic Court, O. of A., a brilliant future is assured.

The grand courts are composed likewise of a certain number of the highest officers from all the subordinate courts in the state. The grand court of New York has by far the largest membership of any similar body, and was organized in 1898, and meets alternately in the city of New York and the other cities of the state in annual assembly, the next one being in the city of Brooklyn June 7 and 8, to which all members are invited.

Long Island City, N. Y., May 30.—Late Monday afternoon a hurry call was sent to police headquarters from Holton's brickyard to which Policemen Kuehn and Charles Murphy responded. When they reached the scene they learned that one Joseph Ferri, an Italian, was accused of bounding a brick off the head of one Edward Kerr, another Italian. Both men were employed on the brickyard. Ferri was arrested and this morning the case was adjourned to Wednesday morning for Recorder Lane.

U. S. POLITICS AND MEXICAN AFFAIRS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, May 30.—With the practical admission that the Carranza note sent to the state department will not be delivered, soon, if at all, some officials here today pointed to the Republican national convention as the cause. At the state department it was strongly intimated that efforts, seemingly successful, have been made to halt all diplomatic negotiations until after the Republican platform has been adopted, because of the probable political effect that would result from a change of the present status.

Army officers today were doubtful whether the president is not going to guide himself largely in his attitude towards Mexico by the opposition platform. The belief is growing, but after the Republican convention President Wilson will consent to a gradual withdrawal of American forces from Mexico. In best informed quarters however, the opinion was expressed that the American troops will stay in Mexico until Villa has been captured or killed.

Officials, meantime, are deeply interested in a probable conference with Secretary of State Lansing tomorrow by Mexican Ambassador Designate Eliseo Arredondo. It is believed that following his expected visit, it will be made known what became of the Carranza note. It was learned today that Arredondo requested a conference late yesterday with Secretary Lansing, but the secretary had left his office. No arrangements were made for a conference today, it being a holiday. The opinion was expressed in official quarters that Arredondo wishes to assure Secretary Lansing that the Carranza note will not be made public or officially delivered at present.

EFFECT OF WAR ON THE HEATHEN

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, May 30.—An uprising of natives in the Congo may result from the war in Europe, according to J. M. Hoffman, a mining engineer, who arrived here today from the Belgian Congo, where he has been located since 1912.

"The natives were always taught to regard a white man's life as sacred," said Hoffman, "but now they are being trained into sharpshooters and are being sent to France to help fight the Germans. Particular instructions are given to them about picking off officers. The whole outlook of these natives is being changed and they are coming to learn that human life among the whites is not held so dear as they had been taught."

Hoffman came on the Cunard liner Orduna. Another passenger was Percy S. Bullen, of the London Daily Telegraph, who declared that the British army is the best in the field today.

HE THOUGHT HE HAD BURGLARPROOF COOP

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

But Some Thief Stole One Hen and Four Chickens Monday Evening, and Burglar Alarm Bell Failed to Ring.

For some time past Jacob Snyder of No. 75 West Union street, has labored under the belief that the way he had arranged a series of wires and bells on his chicken coop in his backyard that it was positively burglar proof, but today Mr. Snyder is a sadder and wiser man, for during Monday night some unknown thief entered the burglar proof coop and helped himself to a white hen and four of her little chicks and made his escape with the fowl, without the alarm bell giving its warning clang. Mr. Snyder is still puzzled to account for the manner in which the thief secured entry to the coop without disturbing the maze of wires with which it is guarded. It is likely that some one who saw the hen and chicks admired the breed and determined it was cheaper to steal them than attempt to buy them. The matter has been reported to the police.

LET US HAVE PEACE SAYS SHERMAN

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, May 30.—A strong plea that the United States maintain its friendly relations with all other nations was voiced in a Decoration Day address delivered by United States Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman of Illinois at memorial services held at Grant's Tomb today under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic. The senator devoted a large section of his address to the European war and the necessity of the United States for the good of humanity, refraining from participation in the great struggle.

"If we fought with every belligerent who has violated our rights under international law, we would war with all, for all have trespassed upon us," said the senator, continuing as follows:

"Our sovereign duty is to forbear. That duty is greater than to rush madly into conflict. 'He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city.' We are the greatest of neutral nations. Peace must come at last."

LAWRENCE Y. SHERMAN, SENATOR OF ILLINOIS.

"As a great neutral this republic will cast the most potent vote in the urn of nations assembled to determine and adjust the peace of the world. The highest destiny of the American people can be fulfilled by peace and not by war."

Senator Sherman paid a tribute to those of alien birth who gave their lives to maintain the Union and then appealed to foreign born citizens to "take no risk of a divided allegiance."

"Lawlessness within our border committed by overt act or encouraged by reckless speech is treason in an American and crime in an alien. The promotion of murder by foreign subjects in a peaceful country cannot be sanctioned by wrapping it with a mantle of patriotism. It is criminality mingled with cowardice. No penalty can be spared in its punishment. Warning by the representatives of foreign powers ought not be necessary to their subjects here to keep the peace. It is, however, the least that can be offered to the outraged sovereignty of the American people."

In these words the speaker paid his tribute to the still living members of the Grand Army of the Republic: "Men of that heroic age you still live to inspire the American with noble purpose and high resolution. You are the living eloquent witnesses of the spirit and the sacrifice that in every age found and defended the nation worthy to live."

Bernhard Hopes For Peace. Berlin, May 30.—"The time has come for public opinion to occupy itself with the subject of peace," says George Bernhard, the famous German publicist, in an article in the Vossische Zeitung. Dr. Bernhard expresses doubt that President Wilson will take any active steps toward mediation, but he seems to think that the war is naturally drawing towards its close and that the people of the allied nations are fully as desirous for peace as the German public. Dr. Bernhard scores the government for forbidding discussions relative to the aims of the war.

FISH DISHES.

As fish dishes of various kinds are always in season a few different ways of serving them may be helpful.

Fish Balls.—Remove the skin and bones from a three-pound fish and shred the fish very fine, add three-fourths of a cupful of water and a good sized onion, chopped fine, a cupful and a half of bread crumbs, a fourth of a cupful of sugar, one and a half teaspoonfuls of salt, a fourth of a teaspoonful of pepper, three egg whites and two tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Mold the mixture after blending well into balls. Put the skin and bones of the fish into a saucepan, add a second onion, sliced, and a tablespoonful of butter, drop in the fish balls and cover with boiling water and simmer for one and a quarter hours. Remove the balls and strain off the liquor on to three egg yolks slightly beaten, stir until thick but do not boil. Pour over the fish balls and serve either hot or cold.

Black Bass Baked.—Take a bass weighing three pounds. Split the fish and remove the bones. Place a thick brown paper in a dripping pan, lay the fish on it skin side down, and dust with salt and pepper, and dot with bits of butter, using two tablespoonfuls. Bake in a hot oven eight minutes to the pound. When done slip a spatula under the fish and slide it on to a platter, the skin will adhere to the paper.

Finnan Haddle.—Cover two pounds of finnan haddle with boiling water and simmer for ten minutes; make a sauce of a tablespoonful each of butter and flour, salt and pepper to taste, three-fourths of a cupful of milk and a tablespoonful of chopped chives. Skin the fish and flake it, butter a baking dish, put in a layer of the fish, then one of sauce, and one hard cooked egg chopped. Continue until all is used and three more hard cooked eggs. Cover with buttered crumbs and brown in the oven.

Pananas dipped in flour and fried in hot fat, and sprinkled with a slight squeeze of lemon, makes a fine relish with broiled fish.

AUTOMOBILE NOTES.

In spite of the threatening weather in the early morning hundreds of automobilists came to Kingston over every road to see the big parade and spend Memorial Day with friends in town. During the early part of the day the main streets of the city poured forth an endless stream of machines, bearing licensees from many adjacent states.

After the parade this morning the Ashokan boulevard was one of the busiest roads in the entire state and the traffic over this thoroughfare was continuous. Hundreds of tourists made the trip around New York's great reservoir and after the trip made this city their headquarters. All the hotels were crowded to capacity with guests and the garages were kept busy supplying wants of the motorists.

Motorcycles made a fine showing in the Poughkeepsie 292 mile endurance run under the auspices of the Motorcycle Club of that city, there being forty starters who took part. The course included all kinds of roads and led through Albany, Canajoharie, Oneonta and Kingston. A score of starters checked in at the local Indian motorcycle agency between 6 and 7 o'clock Sunday night, but only six of these had perfect scores into Kingston. The first machine to check was an Indian light-weight, the smallest machine entered. The Kingston Motorcycle Club will stage a similar event next month. Charles N. Behrens of the Kingston Indian agency said that the results of Sunday's twenty hour endurance run would not be announced for several days.

Harris Brown, proprietor of Brown's Vulcanizing Works on Downs street, and local agent for the Diamond Squeezee automobile tires, has instituted a novel and ingenious device in the way of a service car for his patrons. A Ford chassis has been fitted out with a body to represent a section of the Diamond tire, the sides of the car being painted red, with a black top to represent the tread of the car, and the anti-skid squeezes form a part of the top of the car. The body work, which is of metal, was built by Eltinge Longyear, the Broadway plumber, while the painting was done by Augustus O. Stouder, the wagon painter on Hurley avenue. Besides the novel advertisement which the car affords it will be used as a service car for the patrons of Mr. Brown. Any one who is unfortunate in having trouble on the road may secure extra tires or tubes by calling Brown's tire house, No. 756. The car was designed by Mr. Brown and is the only one in existence in the country. The bus will furnish a means for quick service to those who are caught out in the country without an extra tire. The car will also be used in soliciting orders and delivering goods.

Makes Marvelous Cures

Will see patients in Kingston

EVERY FRIDAY

AT 340 BROADWAY

Dr. Swinburne of Albany

Has had such a remarkable success in treatment of difficult cases that many patients have been cured, even after other doctors declared them incurable. If you are suffering from any trouble and your family physician does not cure, it is time to see a specialist without further delay. It is not necessary now, to go to New York to consult a specialist, for you can see Dr. Swinburne in Kingston at 340 Broadway, every Friday, and in most cases the results will be better and save the expense and trouble of going to New York. The treatment given by Dr. Swinburne is most effectual and has cured many cases, even after New York specialists had failed.

Now matter how much you are suffering or how severe your trouble may be, you have not half tried to get well unless you have given this method a trial. It will cost nothing to see the doctor and talk over our trouble, and if you desire to take treatment the charges will be reasonable.

The doctor has permanent offices at 340 Broadway, Kingston, where patients can secure consultation on Fridays from 9 to 12 a. m. and 1 to 4 p. m. Also Thursday evenings, 6:30 to 8 p. m.

The three piece tailored suit is especially smart this season, and practical too, because as the warm weather comes, the coat may be discarded and one can feel well dressed in the frock. Illustrated is an outfit shown in navy serge combined with georgette crepe. The peasant blouse is a charming detail, as are the fichu collar and cuffs of white georgette crepe.

FISH DISHES.

As fish dishes of various kinds are always in season a few different ways of serving them may be helpful.

Fish Balls.—Remove the skin and bones from a three-pound fish and shred the fish very fine, add three-fourths of a cupful of water and a good sized onion, chopped fine, a cupful and a half of bread crumbs, a fourth of a cupful of sugar, one and a half teaspoonfuls of salt, a fourth of a teaspoonful of pepper, three egg whites and two tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Mold the mixture after blending well into balls. Put the skin and bones of the fish into a saucepan, add a second onion, sliced, and a tablespoonful of butter, drop in the fish balls and cover with boiling water and simmer for one and a quarter hours. Remove the balls and strain off the liquor on to three egg yolks slightly beaten, stir until thick but do not boil. Pour over the fish balls and serve either hot or cold.

Black Bass Baked.—Take a bass weighing three pounds. Split the fish and remove the bones. Place a thick brown paper in a dripping pan, lay the fish on it skin side down, and dust with salt and pepper, and dot with bits of butter, using two tablespoonfuls. Bake in a hot oven half an hour to one hour, depending on the size of the fish. When done slip a spatula under the fish and slide it on to a platter; the skin will adhere to the paper.

Finnan Haddie.—Cover two pounds of finnan haddie with boiling water and simmer for ten minutes; make a sauce of a tablespoonful each of butter and flour, salt and pepper to taste, three-fourths of a cupful of milk and a tablespoonful of chopped chives. Stir the fish and make it, butter a baking dish, put in a layer of the fish, then one of sauce, and one hard cooked egg chopped. Continue until all is used and three more hard cooked eggs. Cover with buttered crumbs and brown in the oven.

Bananas dipped in flour and fried in hot fat and sprinkled with a slight squeeze of lemon, makes a fine relish with broiled fish.

LITTLE JOHNNY SMILES

Why is little Johnny pleased?

Because he doesn't have to fill the coal-bod any more.

Is that all?

No. He doesn't have to fill the wood-box any more either, nor empty the ashes. You see, Johnny's mother has bought a New Perfection Oil Cook Stove.

Instead of coal or wood, she burns Socony Kerosene Oil, and it costs her only six cents a day to cook for a family of six.

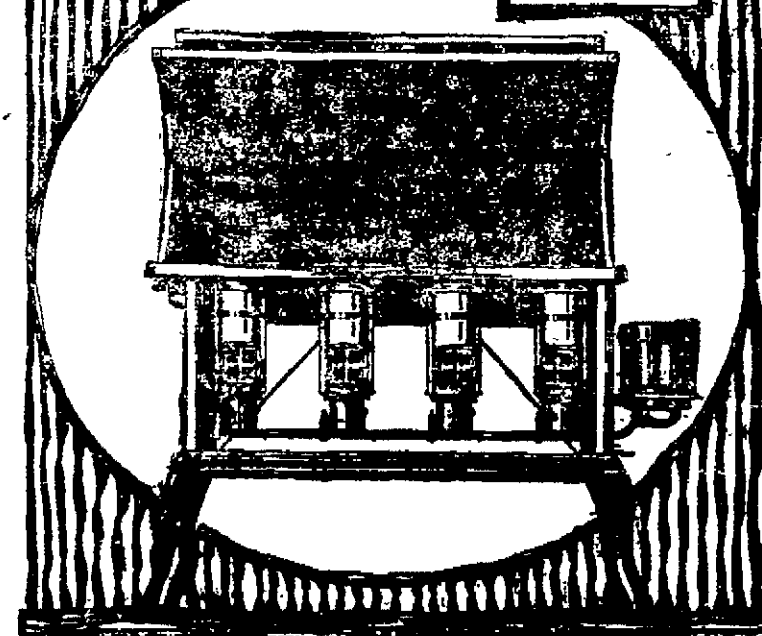

How nice for Johnny!

Look for the long blue chimney burner—that's what makes the New Perfection efficient and trouble-proof.

The 1916 models have the new patented reversible glass reservoir and many other improvements. Sold in 1, 2, 3 and 4 burner sizes (by hardware, furniture and general stores) everywhere.

KINGSTON, N. Y., MAY 30, 1916.

Students of contemporary history cannot fail to feel deep interest in the official statement given out regarding the proceedings of the meeting in Chicago this week of representatives of "all large organizations of Americans of German ancestry throughout the country." This gathering condemned "every official act and policy which shows passionate attachment for one belligerent nation or inveterate antipathy for another," and declared that "any candidate for the Presidency who is not in accord with this view is unworthy the support of a free and independent electorate." There is much more along the same line in the platform. Nobody can take exception to such sentiments. Of course we do not want a President who will let his personal attachments or antipathies embroil us in war. It was hardly necessary to hold a convention in favor of this principle. No judicial mind can avoid the conclusion that this whole performance was insincere. The delegates know as well as anybody that American sentiment was always especially friendly to Germany until the Government of that country began to murder non-combatants on the high seas and sent a horde of spies to infect this country. If complaisance with such activities is a necessary qualification for the Presidency we shall be unable to get any patriotic American to hold the office. We never hear of any organizations of Americans of English, Irish, French, Italian or Slavonian ancestry raising race issues in our politics. It is outrageous that agitators of German descent should do so.

Secretary McAdoo is urging Congress to make a bigger appropriation for the work of collecting income taxes. He says that investigators last year turned into the treasury $8,400,000 not originally reported, and intimates that this was but a small part of what might have been collected if the force had been adequate to the task. From other sources comes information which corroborates this theory. Men who are ordinarily honest will cheat the Government if they think they can do so without discovery, just as pious deacons will dodge paying fares on steam railroad or trolley cars on occasion. Moreover, men who would scorn to dodge a tax have in numerous cases made mistakes in their returns through inability to understand the complicated forms which they are required to fill out. Most men who have undertaken the task have a subconscious feeling that the forms are made obscure on purpose, so as to catch somebody. Mr. McAdoo recommends that publicity be given to the returns, at least when they are found to be defective. This would be just enough in the case of rogues, but would be an unmerited hardship to men who have done their best. We have knowledge that in our own town men who made reports as accurate as they were able were fined because of honest mistakes. There is no way for an official to tell an honest from a dishonest error, and under the McAdoo plan many square men would be branded as crooks. That would be nothing of importance, however, if a thousand or so new jobs were created for "deserving Democrats."

With the inauguration of preferential presidential primaries the instructed delegate became a part of our political system, but the system this year has fallen down and less than one-fifth of the delegates to any of the National political conventions which will be held next month have been instructed. The direct primary is too cumbersome to apply to the entire country. It is too bulky for practical use in a State the size of New York. It works well in a county, city, assembly district or town. President Wilson will be re-nominated by the Democratic party unless a miracle intervenes. Who will be the nominee of the Republican or Progressive parties is a matter for speculation in which one man's guess is as good as another's. But neither the delegates who will nominate Wilson nor those who will select the Republican or Progressive nominees have been instructed by their constituencies except in a few instances. Some of the states have instructed their delegates for favorite sons who are candidates for the nomination and have made a campaign for it and in some States the voters have made a choice of delegates who were pledged to support certain other men from other States whose nomination has been urged. The choice of the Republican convention will go before the people on a record of selection marked by deliberation unknown to the Democratic convention of this year or that which nominated Wilson four years ago. The activity of the Progressive Convention which will be in session in Chicago during the same week as the Republican convention, is more speculative than the conventions of that party ever have been, but all the National conventions demonstrate the futility of preferential presidential primaries either in cases where the candidate is picked in advance, as in Wilson's case, or where parties are seeking the candidate who best measures up to the responsibilities of the position.

LITTLE LAUGHS.

She—"How did you ever come to marry?" He—"Oh, it's the same old story. Started out to be good friends, you know, and later on changed their minds."—Fall Mall Gazette.

"Boo hoo," sobbed little Clarence: "A bad boy threw a stone and it hit my new hat." "Now be a little man and don't cry just because a horrid boy threw a stone and hit your hat," said his mother. "Yes, but my head was in it when he hit it."—Puck.

"Where do you intend to go this summer?" "I'm going to stay at home," replied Mr. Dustin Star. "My family's going away and I'm going to embrace the opportunity to sit in my shirt-sleeves and smoke cigars in the best rooms in the house."—Washington Star.

During the recent Shakespeare celebration, a number of local amateurs appeared in the great dramatist's most famous tragedy. Next day the principal actor inquired of a critical friend what he thought of the performance. "It was great! Simply great!" was the reply. "As you played Hamlet it was easy to see why Ophelia should go and drown herself."—Boston Transcript.

Languishing.

Secretary Redfield said at a dinner in Washington:

"Business, when government adopts a suspicious attitude toward it, languishes like the father under the clutch of seasickness."

"A father, noted for his savagery, lay seashore in his deck chair, while his wife read her novel at his side, and their little son Tommy played about the deck."

"After a while Tommy got very noisy. He was rebuked by his mother, but he still kept up his noise."

"So she turned for help to her husband."

"I wish you'd speak to Tommy," she said.

The seashore man, who ordinarily would have had Tommy across his knee and roaring in a liffy, said in a hollow listless voice, without opening his eyes:

"How'd do, Tommy?"—Washington Star.

A Non-Conductor.

An East Side teacher was endeavoring to elucidate some of the simpler phenomena of electricity, and at the close of her little lecture said sweetly: "Can any of you children give me the name of some non-conductor and tell about it in a few words?" A sharp-eyed urchin exclaimed: "I kin, teacher. Sam Holly's old man is one. They was a spotter on his car seen him knock down a fare. Old Holly's a non-conductor ever since."—Philadelphia Star.

They Knew the War.

As the tourist walked along the quiet country lane, sudden wallings broke the peaceful silence.

The tourist at once pushed his way through a copple to see what was wrong, and found a sturdy countrywoman mercilessly thrashing a howling youngster.

"Here, I say," he burst out indignantly, as he grasped the belabored's arms, "you mustn't do that! What's the poor little chap done?"

"Wot's he done?" gasped the angry woman. "Well, if you want know, 'e left the fowl-house door open, and all the chickens 'ave got out!"

"Come, now, that's not very serious," said the man soothingly. "Chickens always come home to roost, you know."

"Come 'ome to roost!" snorted the woman. "Them chickens will all go 'ome."—London Answers.

The Stranger.

A stranger knocked at a man's door and told him of a fortune to be made.

"Um," said the man. "It appears that considerable effort will be involved."

"Oh, yes," said the stranger; "you will pass many sleepless nights and toilsome days!"

"Um," said the man. "And who are you?"

"I am called Opportunity."

"Um," said the man. "You call yourself Opportunity, but you look like hard work to me."

And he slammed the door.—Pittsburgh Post.

BOOMERS BUSY DAYS IN CHICAGO

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, May 30.—Underneath the surface of apparent calm along Michigan avenue, made necessary by the character of the day, the political activities of half a dozen presidential candidates eddied and swirled today.

The eyes of the men in the maelstrom were not in Chicago, half of them were turned toward the east in the forlorn hope that the Sphinx-like silence of Justice Hughes would in some mysterious manner break for a brief instant and give them an insight into the next two weeks. The other half were looking towards the west where Col. Roosevelt will this afternoon make one of his most important pre-convention speeches at Kansas City. It is admittedly around these two figures, so diametrically opposite in their positions, that the situation revolved today, and quite probably will continue to revolve until the seventh of June.

The advent of Frank H. Hitchcock into the Chicago whirl has more or less marked the crystallization of the Hughes pre-convention movement here. Mr. Hitchcock is so insistent and seemingly so confident that Justice Hughes will accept the nomination if it is tendered him that managers of the favorite sons and the smaller fry are slightly disconcerted. The only disturbing element is that Mr. Hitchcock frankly admits that he hasn't seen the justice for months and has no direct information from him that the nomination would be acceptable. There is a suspicion, however, especially among the smaller managers, that Mr. Hitchcock is not talking blindly.

Just as Hitchcock's arrival crystallized the Hughes sentiment here, so did the colonel's whirlwind arrival and departure yesterday give an added impetus to the movement of his candidacy.

Immediately on his departure came the announcement of the formation of a committee of Illinois Republicans, headed by J. Ogden Armour, to work for the nomination of the Oyster Bay sage. The first meeting of this new committee will be held on Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock. And in addition to the Illinois Republicans who will take part, it is practically assured that other mid-western Rooseveltians will join in the movement.

Today also was marked with the actual beginning of pre-convention activities of the Burton men. Headquarters are in charge of Wade H. Ellis, assistant attorney general in the Taft administration, and one of the men who played a prominent part in directing the formation of the 1908 platform.

Ellis summarized the situation as follows:

"Hughes, Roosevelt or Burton. The first is not a candidate, the second cannot expect the nomination. The third is about the only man acceptable to both sides. I speak with no disparagement of other 'favorite sons.'"

As incoming trains bring additional New Yorkers to the battle ground it becomes more and more evident that the fight that will be staged between the Hughes and Root factions will prove one of the most interesting side lights of the convention.

The first actual business of the 1916 convention will come tomorrow when the sub-committee on arrangements holds a meeting. All the members drifted in last night and today.

The number of contested seats stood at sixty-one today, Texas filling eight additional ones. And it is possible North Carolina will be allowed to enter 21 contests, bringing the grand total to 82—just about one-third the number four years ago.

Glenwood

"It certainly does make cooking easy"

Complete Gas Range attached to the end of Coal Range.

Glenwoods are Brim Full of Good Things

The Glenwood Balanced Baking Damper is far ahead of any other—it is as positive as the turning of a railroad switch—open to start the fire, closed to bake—just this one damper for kindling or baking and best of all, it can't warp or stick.

The Glenwood Revolving Coal Grate is easy to shake at all times, and simply fine for removing clinkers. It is triangular in shape, with three different sides for wear.

The Ash Pan rests on a roller bearing frame—just open door and it rolls out at the slightest touch, neat and clean.

The Glenwood Shelf Under Oven Door is not stationary—it automatically raises and lowers as oven door is opened or closed. It is always level with oven bottom—a great convenience when basting meats or removing food.

The Glenwood Sectional Top is interchangeable—cross pieces can not warp—a wash boiler can be placed at the back as well as in front for quick heating, leaving the front holes free for cooking.

Glenwood Iron is smooth and perfect—the easiest of any to clean—a real delight to the most exacting housekeeper. Get one and you'll be glad ever after.

EL ARISH BOMBARDED.

An Almost Forgotten Place Recalled by Fortunes of War.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, D. C., May 30.—El Arish, one of the world's forgotten places until the English bombarded it a few days ago, is the subject of a war geography bulletin, issued today by the National Geographic Society from its Washington headquarters, which says:

"With its large square fort and battlemented walls, El Arish presents a much more formidable and imposing appearance, viewed from the Mediterranean to the north and from the Desert et-Tih to the south, than its importance has warranted in recent years. Formerly a populous halting place for the numerous caravans following the 'short desert route' from Egypt to Syria, its trade has waned materially since the completion of modern railway connections with Jaffa, Port Said and Alexandria. The town, clinging to the banks of the Wadi-el-Arish, a stream which becomes a small torrent after every rain. It is more than a hundred miles southwest of Jerusalem and a slightly shorter distance from the Suez Canal, which lies to the west.

The recent hostilities in this area revive a host of historical associations dating as far back as the time of the Pharaohs when this town was a place of exile for political prisoners, its ancient name being Khinokhura. Its present name is supposed to be derived from the custom which obtained here of 'cutting off the noses' of malefactors whose death sentences had been commuted.

"Some thirty miles to the east of El Arish, on the Egyptian-Syrian boundary, lies ancient Raphia, now called Er-Rafa, where Josephus tells us that the Roman conqueror Titus made his first stop on his march against Jerusalem. Here also Sargon overwhelmed the Egyptians in the eighth century before the Christian era, and five hundred years later there was fought on the same sands the famous battle between Ptolemy Philopator and Antiochus, when the charging elephants of both armies played such a spectacular role. Of these great beasts, which had been introduced into Syrian and Greek warfare after Alexander's conquests in India, much was expected. The battle opened with a trumpeting dash of the opposing armoured mountains of flesh, Ptolemy's forces commanding 73 of the terror-inspiring chargers while Antiochus sent into the fray 102. With the first onslaught practically all of Ptolemy's elephants were captured, yet he won the day.

"El Arish fell before Napoleon's Egyptian army in September, 1798, the credit for the city's fall being given to France's great general, Kleber, commander of the vanguard which also seized Jaffa and Gaza. It was during this campaign that Napoleon committed the great atrocity at Jaffa, shooting those prisoners whom he could neither guard nor feed, yet whom he feared to release. After Napoleon's departure, Kleber concluded a convention at El Arish with the English admiral Sir William Sidney Smith, whereby the French were to be allowed to capitulate and were to receive safe transport back to France. This agreement was revoked by Lord Keith, however. Whereupon Kleber, with 10,000 men, marched to Heliopolis and administered a crushing defeat to the Turks who outnumbered him six to one. Had not a fanatic assassinated the great French tactician on the day that Napoleon won the battle of Marengo, the fate of French arms in Egypt might have been different.

"The Admiral Smith whose agreement with Kleber was disallowed, was the same British officer who had caused the signal defeat of Napoleon before the walls of Acre, a relief work for which a grateful parliament voted him an annuity of a thousand pounds.

"In the center of the town of El Arish is a granite wall with an inscription in hieroglyphics, perpetuating a curious legend about the Egyptian god Sakh, a short distance beyond the wall, the traveler is shown the ruins of the building in which Baldwin I, one of the Crusader kings of Jerusalem, died in 1118, after an unsuccessful attack on the city.

AUTOMOBILE NOTES.
In spite of the threatening weather in the early morning hundreds of automobilists came to Kingston over every road to see the big parade and spend Memorial Day with friends in town. During the early part of the day the main streets of the city poured forth an endless stream of machines, bearing licensees from many adjacent states.

After the parade this morning the Ashokan boulevard was one of the busiest roads in the entire state and the traffic over this thoroughfare was continuous. Hundreds of tourists made the trip around New York's great reservoir and after the trip made this city their headquarters. All the hotels were crowded to capacity with guests and the garages were kept busy supplying wants of the motorists.

Motorcycles made a fine showing in the Poughkeepsie 292 mile endurance run under the auspices of the Motorcycle Club of that city, there being forty starters who took part. The course included all kinds of roads and led through Albany, Canajoharie, Oneonta and Kingston. A score of starters checked in at the local Indian motorcycle agency between 6 and 7 o'clock Sunday night, but only six of these had perfect scores into Kingston. The first machine to check was an Indian light-weight, the smallest machine entered. The Kingston Motorcycle Club will stage a similar event next month. Charles N. Behrens of the Kingston Indian agency said that the results of Sunday's twenty hour endurance run would not be announced for several days.

Harris Brown, proprietor of Brown's Vulcanizing Works on Downs street, and local agent for the Diamond Squeezee automobile tires, has instituted a novel and ingenious device in the way of a service car for his patrons. A Ford chassis has been fitted out with a body to represent a section of the Diamond tire, the sides of the car being painted red, with a black top to represent the tread of the car, and the anti-skid squeezes form a part of the top of the car. The body work, which is of metal, was built by Eltinge Longyear, the Broadway plumber, while the painting was done by Augustus O. Steuding, the wagon painter on Hurley avenue. Besides the novel advertisement which the car affords it will be used as a service car for the patrons of Mr. Brown. Any one who is unfortunate in having trouble on the road may secure extra tires or tubes by calling Brown's tire house, No. 796. The car was designed by Mr. Brown and is the only one in existence in the country. The bus will furnish a means for quick service to those who are caught out in the country without an extra tire. The car will also be used in soliciting orders and delivering goods.

FOUR THOUSAND MARCH IN PREPAREDNESS PARADE

Huge Crowd Sees Monster Memorial Day Parade and Preparedness Demonstration, the Biggest Parade by Citizens of Kingston Ever Given Here.

Memorial Day in Kingston was marked by the biggest parade of citizens in the history of the city and one of the largest holiday crowds which has ever come here.

The parade was the big feature of the day, and a careful estimate of the number of men in line places the number at more than four thousand, which is as large a number as Kingston parades have contained, and is larger than any former parade made up almost exclusively of residents of Kingston.

Graves Decorated Early.

The graves of the veterans of the War of the Rebellion, the Revolutionary soldiers and Spanish War veterans were decorated by school children at an early hour. The pupils who decorated the graves met at their respective school houses at eight o'clock and were escorted by details appointed by Pratt Post, No. 127, G. A. R. and Colonial Camp, No. 75, Spanish War Veterans, who escorted the boys to the corner of Broadway and Pine Grove avenue. The school girls, in charge of their teachers, marched to the nearest trolley lines and cars provided by the Kingston Consolidated Railroad Company carried them free of charge to Broadway and Pine Grove avenue, whence most of them and the boys of the schools marched to Wiltwyck Cemetery, where the larger number of veterans' graves are located. Montrose Cemetery, St. Peter's Cemetery, St. Mary's Cemetery, and Mount Zion Cemetery were by no means neglected, but at each cemetery the graves of the veterans were decorated.

The Dead Remembered.

All of the cemeteries presented a finer appearance than in any previous year and the floral decorations were more artistic although not as elaborate as in years when weather conditions have brought outdoor flowering plants to full bloom by this time of year. The present backward season has prevented many people making use of flowering plants and shrubs whose blossoms usually are found in abundance by Memorial Day, and florists' flowers substituted. Nightfall of Monday found all of the cemeteries with hundreds of graves decorated by families in memory of those who have died, and the addition of bouquets early this morning by families and by the school children made veritable bowers of the resting places of the dead.

Hundreds of Visitors Here.

The influx of visitors exceeded all expectations. Most of them came by automobile for the express purpose of witnessing the parade and afterward went touring in the country. A large number of automobilists on their way to and from the Catskills for the day remained in town until after the parade. Visiting automobile parties began arriving in town early Monday evening and all the hotels were filled to their capacity Monday night.

The Big Parade.

The parade started promptly at ten o'clock, when ten taps on the fire alarm gave the signal. Before that time all the organizations taking part had marched to the streets to which they had been assigned, and were escorted to their place in line by details of Company M. The line of march was from the city hall up Broadway to Albany avenue, thence around the Academy triangle and countermarching on Broadway to McEntee street, to Wurts street, to Rogers street, to Broadway and thence countermarching again on Broadway to the city hall, where the parade disbanded.

The order of march was somewhat changed from the original plan as published, but the formation of the divisions was carried out.

Heading the parade came a squad of the New York aqueduct police from Brown's Station, and they received a hearty ovation. The mounts of the patrolmen were in fine fettle and they almost kept time to the music. Behind the patrolmen were Major Chandler, grand marshal of the parade, who was given hearty applause along the entire line of march, and his staff, consisting of Captain W. J. Cranston of Company M, County Judge Jenkins, Kenneth Archer and Ferd Gildersleeve.

The first division, headed by William R. Kraft and Roger H. Loughran, was led by the Colonial Band of forty pieces with Prof. George H. Muller as leader, and Company M. The military organization made the best appearance it has ever made in any parade and the appreciation of the spectators everywhere was manifested by applause as the guardsmen passed.

Seventeen automobiles contained the Civil War veterans, each of whom carried an American flag. There was not the applause for the veterans which there usually is when they appear in parades but the silence was a mark of the deep respect of everyone for the survivors of the ranks which formerly were well filled when the veterans marched in former Memorial Day parades. The ranks have been decimated rapidly in the last few years and nobody who saw the parades of former years could fail to observe the difference in their number and appearance.

Behind the Civil War veterans marched other veteran military men—thirty members of Colonial Camp, Spanish War Veterans; the same number of members of the Old Guard Association of Ulster County, and Tappan Camp, No. 1, Sons of Veterans.

Boy Scouts Make a Hit.

The Boy Scouts, who came next, received the biggest ovation of any organization in line, and nobody begrudged it to them. The applause was continuous and spontaneous. The boys marched with the firm tread of seasoned veterans, and their attention was not distracted for an instant by any amount of applause from the ranks of the spectators who lined the sidewalks along the entire route. The Boy Scout movement was brought forcibly home to many a man on the sidewalk, and people who have paid but little attention to the Scouts and what they are doing found themselves more interested in the boys than ever before.

Warm Welcome for High School Students.

Next to the warmth of the reception accorded to the Boy Scouts was that given to the high school students, who were led by Garfield's Band of Albany. Superintendent Michael and the members of the board of education led the division composed of the boys of the high school and the citizens. There was applause for the officials of the education system of the city, but the boys' appearance was the signal for a demonstration which began when they started to march and continued until they finished. With but little preliminary training, the boys marched in good order and displayed an ability to take care of themselves on parade equal to their ability to make good within the school room.

The civic division, which was started originally as a preparedness demonstration, turned out nearly a thousand men, all of whom marched with American flags. First in the civic section, which followed the high school students, came the lawyers of the city, behind whom marched the doctors, wearing the Red Cross on their arms. Behind them came business men, bankers, factory employers and employees, salesmen and scores of others whose organizations did not take part in the parade.

in a body. From every point of view, the Citizens' Corps was a success and it ranked third in the amount of applause received along the line of march.

Uniformed Civic Organizations.

Of the civic organizations which appeared in uniform, those which attracted the most attention were the Uniformed Rank of the Junior Order United American Mechanics and the Fourth Degree Assembly Knights of Columbus. The former carried rifles and the latter carried swords. The uniform of the Mechanics is of a military type, while that of the Knights of Columbus consisted of frock coats, with sashes, and silk hats. Behind the uniformed bodies of each organization marched the members of the order who have not yet passed through the higher degrees of membership.

Minnevaska Tribe, No. 126, I. O. R. M., and Wawarising Tribe, No. 223, I. O. R. M., appeared in their traditional Red men costume and attracted much attention and applause. Their accoutrements were in strong keeping with the early traditions of Kingston, and Colonial scenes were readily re-enacted in the imagination as spectators recalled the days when real red men marched along paths which now form the streets over which today's parade passed. Minnevaska Tribe carried the largest American flag in the parade, 25 men being required to carry it.

Firemen Receive Applause.

The volunteer fire organizations of the city which took part in the parade fully merited the enthusiasm with which they were received. Excelsior Hose Company led the firemen's division, whose other companies were Wiltwyck Hose Company, the Central Hook and Ladder Company, Rapid Hose Company and Union Hose Company. The companies marched without their apparatus but were greeted with an enthusiasm and effectiveness attesting their popularity.

Odd Fellows Had Large Turnout.

The Odd Fellows of Kingston had the largest division of any organization in line. There were members of Kosciuszki Lodge, Aretas Lodge, United German Lodge, Kingston Lodge and C. S. Clay Lodge, and they presented a fine appearance. The Odd Fellows, with the Loyalty Order of the Moose and Patriotic Order Sons of America formed the last division of the parade, and it was well worth while standing along the line of march to wait for their appearance.

Other organizations which did not turn out such large numbers but which made an excellent ap-

"There's a Reason"

A Strip of Seaweed

It Was Given as a Token at the Time of a Betrothal.

By F. A. MITCHEL

In the olden time Newport, R. I., was an important shipping port. Indeed, until the period of the Revolution a number of points on the Atlantic coast were about equally prominent in this respect. As the years rolled on all except New York, Boston and Philadelphia dropped out, the latter finally leaving the first the supremacy.

In that early day on the beach where now in the summer season hundreds, at times thousands, of fashionable persons drive and lounge and bathe, one moonlight night a young man and a girl sat looking out upon the glided water. They were Edmond Roscoe and Evalina Blair, the young man a son of a prominent shipowner, the girl the daughter of a merchant. There were no sounds of revelry in the little town back of them, as there are now at that season, and, as for the beach, not a sound was to be heard except the splash of the sluggish waves as they broke and rolled in on the sand.

There could be no more fitting place for a young man to tell his story to a maiden, and Edmond Roscoe was telling Evalina Blair his love for her. Then and there their throats were plighted in the yellow light of the moon, the lovers' voices accompanied by the ever-fading sound of the waves as they slid up in foam on the smooth sands.

There were both happiness and sadness for these two young creatures whose lives seemed so much to them. In a few days they were to part for several years. Evalina was to go to England, where her education might be finished under the supervision of an aunt, for she was of the Blairs of Devonshire, a family of country gentlemen and ladies of blue blood, and must needs be given accomplishments suitable to her rank. Edmond was to enter Brown university, which was then in its infancy and soon to give up its seat to the dormitory to quarter soldiers of the Revolution.

The transports of betrothal were scarcely over when Edmond said:

"You are going to a land where you will meet many persons of rank and of fashion. I know that you will be a belle among them. Some man, possibly a noble, will fall in love with you. You will dread to return to this uncultivated land. You will remain in England, and I shall never see you again."

Looking at him through her earnest eyes, she replied:

"Give me some token by which I shall remember these words of yours. If I am tempted by fortune to remain in England I promise you I will look at it and am sure it will bring up before me the happiness of this evening, and I shall choose you and the life of a simple Rhode Island woman in preference to that of a lady of rank."

"Alas, I have nothing suitable. I should give you a ring or—"

"I wish no bauble," replied Evalina. "Give me something to remind me of these sands, the ocean, the plash of the waves."

Looking about him, Edmond saw a seaweed lying within his reach. Taking it up, he handed it to Evalina. She took it and, spreading it out on her lap, said:

"I, Evalina, promise you, Edmond, that in case I am tempted to place rank and fortune before my love for you I will think of you with this plant of the sea before me. And I assure you that when I have finished my education I will bring the token to you as evidence that I have been true to you and my heart has been always yours."

After this assurance there was a long embrace. Then they arose and, taking a path which is now a broad avenue, returned to the town.

Every day, or rather, every evening, till Evalina's departure the lovers went to the beach. They were not troubled even in the daytime with persons to disturb their meetings. There were no bathers in fantastic suits, no carriages, no loungers. The last evening before Evalina's departure they passed there. The moon rose, as it were, out of the ocean, the first spark appearing like a far distant bonfire, then gliding the shore over the crests of the waves, and finally the great round disk rested on the horizon of water.

"Heaven grant," said Edmond, "that we will again see this beautiful sight and that we shall then be one."

"If I like you will have your wish," replied Evalina.

The next day the ship that was to carry her to England sailed from the little town on Narragansett bay, the lovers waving until they could distinguish each other's forms no longer.

During the first year of their separation Evalina wrote regularly to her lover. The second year abroad was for her an education in social life. As her lover had predicted, she became a belle. She wrote Edmond of the fine people she met, of the amusements common among persons of quality. But her letters showed no diminution of love for him and indicated that she looked forward to their reunion with as much hope and pleasure as when she had left him.

Yet there was a great deal that she did not write him. She did not write of the offers of marriage that followed one another in rapid succession.

When these offers of marriage were showered upon Evalina she declined them without giving as a reason a previous attachment. Later, possibly as one might hide behind gauze, she frequently wore as a decoration the seaweed that her American lover had given her. Sometimes it was tucked to her skirt, sometimes she wore it in her corsage, and again it would be intertwined with her hair. In time she came to be called the Seaweed Lady.

Meanwhile Roscoe was studying as a collegian, though his mind was with his heart, and that was across the ocean. He read with avidity Evalina's letters and shuddered as he thought of the differences between himself, an undergraduate of a college but a few years old, without fortune, compared with some courted man with vast estates. Evalina's letters were reassuring, but she was growing from maidenhood to womanhood, and would she not give way at last?

However, the period allotted for her sojourn abroad was drawing to a close. She did not write her lover that she was coming home for the reason that she did not know if she would be permitted to return. Her parents were much chagrined at hearing that she had refused an earl and the second son of a duke and were debating whether to send the funds for her passage back to America or insist that she remain longer.

It was two years from the time of Evalina's departure that a storm such as Newport had not experienced in many years broke upon the coast. For three days the giant waves struck wildly upon the cliffs and rolled far up into Narragansett bay. Then, on the evening of the third day, the clouds broke away in the west, and the sun set in golden splendor.

That night the moon was at the full. As the sun went down the queen of night rose. Edmond, desiring to view the effect of the storm on the waves, when light had fallen and the moon was lighting the land and the water, started for the beach. The path was lonely, and there was terror in the tumbling of the great waves on the sands. The only likeness to the night of Edmond and Evalina's betrothal was the full moon.

He had passed midway from the town to the water when he saw before him a figure that he knew to be a woman by her garments fluttering in the wind, which was still strong. She seemed to be coming toward him, but as he advanced drew no nearer to him. He went on until he came to the edge of the beach and saw her still distant from him, sometimes flitting nearer, sometimes farther, and always seeming to rock like a bird resting on the crest of a wave.

Whether it was the night, still disturbed by the storm that had passed, or something bewildering in this unsteady figure, Roscoe could never tell, but an appalling premonition stretched a pall over him like the wings of some huge black bird. Something within him seemed to say: "A great misfortune has fallen upon you. The wind and the waves are a dirge. Be strong or you will be crushed."

And now, having reached a point overlooking the water, the sands being soaked, progress was slower. Scattered ragged clouds were flying above, now and again dashing across the face of the moon and shutting off its light. At these dark periods the flitting figure was lost, but reappeared when the cloud had passed and the full light of the moon was released.

Edmond had spent many an hour when he and Evalina had spoken their betrothal, and he saw that the figure was slowly moving toward it. Yet it was the movement of a floating object, driven by alternate advancing and receding waters, yet borne by an invisible tide toward a given point. But notwithstanding this apparently slow movement he gained but little on the figure. At last it reached the very spot where he and Evalina had plighted their troth. There it paused. Hastening his steps so far as he could—the moon at the moment was overcast—advanced to join the figure. When he was a few yards from it a bright light burst from the moon and revealed—Evalina, looking at him with pale and melancholy visage.

He sprang toward her with outstretched arms, but at the moment an other black cloud swept across the face of the only available light and hid his form from her. When it had passed she had vanished.

At his feet was a strip of seaweed. When morning came a boatman stalking along over the soft sands saw a man lying so still that he thought it might be one cast in from a wreck by the storm. He found Edmond Roscoe. There was life in him, and the boatman after rousing him helped him home.

A ship came in and with it news that Evalina had departed for America. But the vessel on which she sailed never reached port. Pieces of wreck came ashore on the coast, denoting that a ship had foundered, but no fragment bore its name.

Edmond Roscoe never went back to college. He had lost all ambition, all desire for life. It was claimed that he had received some physical faculties, whether this was so or whether the loss of his betrothed was his ailment was a coincidence was never settled. He was often seen on the beach at Newport wandering about aimlessly or sitting on one spot looking out on the water. This continued till he was an old man, and in the town in which he lived a few residents of other places began to build cottages for summer residences.

HUGE CROWD TO HEAR CONGRESSMAN WARD

Memorial Day Exercises at the City Hall Attended by a Multitude of Interested and Appreciative People--Addresses by Congressman Ward and the Hon. William E. Thorpe.

Several thousand people were gathered on city hall grounds by the time the parade had counter-marched and broken ranks, the speakers and their escort proceeding to the stand at the east end, where the members of the Grand Army were seated.

Mayor Canfield opened the exercises with the introduction of the Rev. W. F. Stowe, pastor of the Reformed Church of the Comforter, who made the prayer. Then followed a reading of Lincoln's Address at Gettysburg by the Rev. F. W. Moot, of the Ponckhockie Union Church.

Congressman Charles B. Ward was then introduced and spoke in part as follows:

It is very fitting indeed that the people of this old and historic city of Kingston meet here today with such an abundance of patriotism to pay tribute to the living and dead of the Grand Army of the Republic. The people of the city of Kingston and of Ulster county can well be proud of their history. Ulster county has been closely identified with the history of our government and of the state of New York since that history began. The first governor of the state of New York and later vice-president of the United States, General George Clinton, who with his brother fought so valiantly in the revolution, was an Ulster county man. Away back in the year 1683 Ulster county sent her delegates to the colonial assembly; her men fought and played a very important part in the war for independence. Again in the hour of trouble when the great Lincoln called for volunteers to defend the flag and preserve the union the sons of Ulster county responded heroically to the call--and if I understand correctly the manifestation of patriotism I have witnessed here today, if the time should ever come again when our country should need the services of defenders Ulster county will render the same account of herself that history has recorded to her illustrious past.

Along the journey of life there are times when we pause for a moment to honor and to express our tribute to those by whose courage and by whose sacrifice we have benefited. Of such times none is more firmly fixed in the heart of the American people than in Memorial Day. Today, a nation pays homage to those patriots who back in the dark days of 1862-65 fought and died that their country might live. Today we may strew the soldiers' grave with flowers, the tokens of our esteem; we may pronounce the eulogies, so well deserved, but we do not pay full honor to the men living and dead of the Grand Army of the Republic unless we do our full duty as American citizens in time of peace as the men of the Grand Army so nobly did their duty in time of war. As we look back over the years and see what has been done for us, so too if we do our duty as citizens we must look into the future and do what lies in our power to do, for our children and our children's children. As our ancestors have provided for us we must provide for our posterity. By the sacrifice of blood the Grand Army has handed down to our generation a land and a government, a priceless heritage. It is our sacred duty to hand down to the generation that follows us that same heritage with its foundations unshaken and its framework enriched by the wonderful progress and development of the years.

The growth of our country has been the wonder of the world. The first federal census was taken in the year 1790 to determine the federal ratio or the number of men that could be elected to sit in congress. The ratio was then fixed at one in every thirty thousand; now it is one in over one hundred and thirty thousand. The first census showed we had a population of less than four million; it showed also that practically the whole body of people lived along the Atlantic sea-coast and on a strip of land about two hundred and fifty miles wide. On the average our population has increased 100 per cent every five years, and today our people number one hundred million. The first steam railroad built in this country in 1830 ran between Baltimore and Ellicott's Mills, a distance of fourteen miles. Today in the state of New York alone the railroad mileage is more than eight thousand and that of the country more than two hundred thousand. Less than one hundred years ago, back in 1825 Henry Clay, the father of the national road, and President Monroe were congratulating themselves on seeing a national road--the route of the immigrant--built from Maryland through to the Mississippi.

Today thousands upon thousands are traveling on the two million miles of public roads in the United States. It is easy to perceive what progress this enormous building of railroads and highways is indicative of. The Boston News Letter, a weekly paper published in 1704, was the first regular newspaper in the United States, and today, as everyone knows, there are more newspapers and periodicals published in the United States than anywhere in the world. Besides our vast system of schools, where more than eighteen million children receive instruction at the expense of the government, our higher institutions of learning, both public and private, have an enrollment of more than 360,000 and are conceded among the best in the world. Even before the present war had piled up the appalling debt of the belligerent nations we were far ahead of any nation in wealth, our wealth at that time being estimated at $150,000,000,000 or $65,000,000,000 greater than Great Britain and Ireland and $50,000,000,000 greater than Germany. Since the taking of our first federal census one hundred and twenty-six years ago we have grown from a tottering independence to the greatest nation in the world. Looking over the history of our land we see nothing but progress. Honorably, nobly, in the path of integrity and in the light of freedom we have striven to our present day prominence and power. Today we Americans can look upon our country--the one great nation of the world whose resources are not being sapped by the heavy penalty of war and whose people bear the insignia of peace and industry rather than that of war and waste. From ocean to ocean, over the broad expanse of our country, we see humanity at its best in peace, industry and freedom.

CONGRESSMAN WARD.

We see the workmen in the shop and the farmer in the field and with every strike of the hammer and with every turn of the plow we see our country looming bigger, greater and mightier.

We must bear in mind that with our greatness there comes a commensurate degree of responsibility. We must bear the responsibility of our standard of citizenship, for the conservation of our natural resources, for the safety and protection of our own countrymen at home and abroad; for the carrying on of our diplomatic relations in a manner consistent with their vast and growing importance; responsibility for the purity of our fountains of justice and responsibility for the wisdom of our laws and customs in the making. It is our profound duty to keep steadfast and inviolable those fundamental principles in the constitution of the United States, the greatest written instrument of government ever devised, and to uphold that high idealism of equality and justice, the very life blood of true democracy.

This occasion today instills the good old fashioned patriotism. It brings to our minds the noble struggles of the past, as we see the venerable men here who took part in them. It makes us proud that we are Americans. It makes us give expression to that sentiment that every true American must hold, "America first, last and always." It is not in our power to foresee what trials may confront us in the future. Time goes on and the happenings in the world strike here and there. But through tranquility or through trial, success must follow the people who are steadfast to the ideals of true American citizenship. We can not honor the men of the Grand Army more than by maintaining as best we know how the country they once fought to preserve and did preserve. We can all, with mutual sympathy, dedicate our purposes to the end that whatever may be in the path of our destiny as a nation, the principles of liberty, union and equality among men--so close to the hearts of the men who we honor today--will be perpetuated and let our inspiring trust be that the service and glory of our nation in the past will bow in humble recognition to the towering achievements of the future.

The congressman's speech was heartily applauded. He was followed by the Hon. William E. Thorpe of Catskill. Greene county, who said he did not come to lend a bit of color to the occasion but just to give a straight-out talk upon the Grand Army, its sacrifices and services. The speaker said he had tested the hardness of Kingston pavements with the rest of the parade. In glowing praise he pictured the feelings of the surviving members of

GIANTS LOSE IN PHILADELPHIA

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Philadelphia, May 30.--The Giants have been stopped. After winning 17 straight and cleaning up Pittsburgh, Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Boston, they fell against their former team mate, Al Demaree, in this morning's game, and the cartoonist put the Indian sign on them. Perritt's wild throw in the eighth inning when he had an easy double play in sight paved the way for the Phillies' victory 5 to 1. Box score:

To Avoid Colds.
In brief, if you wish to be absolutely immune from colds of all kinds, and their more serious sequences, here is the recipe: Eat abstemiously of non-stimulating food. Fast occasionally. Avoid table salt, woolen underclothing and foul air, and harden the body by exposure to the air and sun, and occasionally to cold water.

MURDEROUS ATTACK ON COL. ROOSEVELT

Knife Hurlled at Him Misses the Colonel but Hits the Automobile He is Riding in.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Kansas City, Mo., May 30.--A knife with a 4-inch blade was hurled at Col. Roosevelt as he rode along Grand avenue in his automobile this morning. The knife missed the colonel by inches. It struck the tonneau door behind which Roosevelt sat and fell to the running board of the car.

Ernest Schell, one of the American Legion guards, who accompanied the Roosevelt car, seized the knife and turned it over to the police. Chief of Police Hammill has a good description of the man who threw the knife but who forced his way back through the crowd and escaped before any among the hundreds who saw the act could stop him.

LOCAL DEATH RECORD.
Recent Deaths and Funerals of Persons in This Vicinity.

William Seitz, an old and respected resident of Ponckhockie, died at his home, No. 87 Abruzzo street, this morning in his 70th year. He is survived by his widow and one daughter, Mrs. C. W. Nickerson, of this city, two brothers, Fred, of this city, and Frank, of Newburgh, and two sisters, Mrs. Eva Leete, of Kingston, and Mrs. LeFeve, of Hoboken. The funeral will be held from the late residence on Thursday afternoon at 2:30 with interment in Montrepose cemetery.

CAUSE OF SHADOWS.
And Why They Are Darker in the Night Than in the Daytime.

Where anything through which rays of light cannot pass intercepts the light rays coming from a luminous body the light rays are turned back in the direction from which they come and the part on the other side of the object which intercepted the light goes into shade and a shadow results.

A shadow then is produced by cutting off one or more light rays. We notice shadows when the sun is bright in the daytime and at night when we walk along the streets lighted partly by street lamps.

The shadows we see in the daytime are caused by our cutting off and throwing back some of the light rays which come from the sun. These are not so dark as the shadows we see at night because the rays of light from the sun are so bright and are reflected from so many other objects to the side and in back of us.

When, however, we are walking along a dimly lighted street and come to a street lamp the shadows our bodies cause are quite black. The night shadows are darker because the source of light is less intense and the objects to the side and in back of us (if we are walking toward the light) do not reflect so much of the light rays as they do of the sun's rays in the daytime.--Philadelphia Press.

Two Little Bills.
Robert was in the habit of expecting reward for every little service. At the end of the week he made out a "bill" to his mother and carefully laid it where her eyes would fall upon it. The items were as follows:
"Mother owes to Robert.
"Five cents for running errands.
"Five cents for being good."
That evening there appeared beside Robert's plate a paper upon which was written:
"Robert owes mother, for years of happiness, nothing; for nursing him through long illnesses, nothing; for doing good to him, nothing."
Thoroughly ashamed of himself, Robert ran to mother, threw his arms around her and sobbed:
"Mother, I will do everything I can for you after this, and I'll never ask you to give me anything but just love."

What Eloping Used to Mean.
An elopement has a very definite meaning in the English language of today. It is restricted by custom to a single meaning, that relating to the disappearance of a pair of sweethearts. But an elopement in advertisements in eighteenth-century newspapers meant the absconding of a slave.

"Elope" is a venerable Scandinavian word, and Eric the Red would be much surprised to know that he would not be eloping from his ship should he jump ashore on the New England coast today. In his day "elope" meant "to leap from."--Des Moines Register.

Shrewd Father.
"So you've decided to name your boy after George Washington?"
"Yes, you see, George has been dead a long time, and so many boys have been named after him who never amounted to anything that our son won't be conspicuous if he disappoints our fondest hopes and fails to become great."--Birmingham Age-Herald.

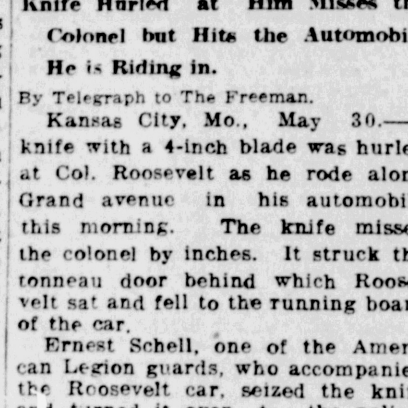

In Modern Times.
"In the old days the main element of a soldier was to know how to act under fire."
"And nowadays, in addition, he is supposed to know how to act under water in the earth and without air."--Puck.

Sociability.
"I hope you are not of those men who go home and find fault with the dinner."
"No," answered Mr. Growcher; "my wife and I eat at a restaurant where we can both find fault."--Washington Star.

A Wish.
"I wish success were a woman."
"Why?"
"Then everybody would know his secret."--Detroit Free Press.

WILLIAM McMANUS, OF K. K. STRAP INSTEAD OF JAIL FOR BOYS WHO ROBBED J. P. MORGAN OFFICE.

New York, May 30.--The good old fashioned strap properly applied probably will be the only punishment meted out to William McManus and William J. Bain, the sixteen year old office boys in the banking offices of J. P. Morgan and Company, who ran away with $10,516.32 belonging to the firm. The boys were captured in Philadelphia. Ted Daly, another lad, who accompanied them to Philadelphia, escaped.

McManus, who was known in the Morgan office as the "Angel-faced boy with the sweet voice," was handed the money in bills and change, together with a bunch of envelopes in which the money was to be placed for the regular weekly pay roll. He slipped out of the office, pausing only long enough to ask his friend, Billy Bain, to go along. The accomplice of McManus was not noticed until the men in the office asked for their money.

Most of the money was found on the lads when they were captured by private detectives who picked up the trail and followed the youths to Philadelphia. It is said at the Morgan offices that the boys will not be prosecuted.

At Boarding School.
It was in the dining room of a certain boarding school for young ladies. The place had a reputation of giving pretty poor grub, and the girls never lost an opportunity to rap it one way or the other if the opportunity presented itself.

The other morning at breakfast Miss Jones, the most popular girl in the school, as well as the biggest joker, suddenly surprised everybody by remarking, "Oh, dear me, are we all here?"

"Why, certainly," replied the dignified matron. And she proceeded to count all the girls and call the roll. "Every one is here; no one is missing." "Then I feel very much relieved," replied the sly one, with a wink at the other girls. "I see by the morning paper that a human skeleton was found in the outskirts of this city."

There was a chorus of giggles from the girls, and the matron indignantly rapped for order.--Cincinnati Tribune.

Liszt and Leipzig.
After young Felix Weingartner had finished his work at the Leipzig conservatory he went, as was the fashion at that time, to present himself to Franz Liszt at Weimar. Now, Leipzig, conservative in music then, as it is today, had never received the works of Franz Liszt with sufficient warmth to please him. In fact, Leipzig had shown itself quite unfriendly toward his compositions, and the great master of the piano resented it. Weingartner was presented.

"Charmed," said Liszt. "Where have you studied?"
"At Leipzig, meinster," replied Weingartner.
"Leipzig, Leipzig?" said Liszt, as if he had difficulty in recalling the city, which, as a matter of fact, is only two or three hours away. "Oh, yes!" and the light of remembrance came into his eyes. "That's a fine place to take breakfast when you're on the way from here to Dresden."

Earliest School Books.
Among the discoveries in the archaeological excavations in ancient Babylon are some stone tablets believed to have been used as schoolbooks in the first regular school ever held in the world. They are in the collection of the University of Pennsylvania.

These prehistoric text books have marks proving that they were used in a school conducted in a temple in Nippur more than 2,500 years B. C. This school is known to have been in existence at least 1,000 years, and no records have yet been found to indicate the existence of any preceding it. The tablets contain notes upon several sciences, evidently made upon the stone surface by a stylus. Several of them contain two forms of characters, indicating that the pupils attempted to copy the work of the teacher.

His Narrow Escape.
First Traveler--So you have returned from Africa? Have any narrow escapes?
Second Traveler--Only one--a regular prize winner, I should think.

First Traveler--Let me hear it.
Second Traveler--Well, I was chased by a lion, and, having no cartridges left, I threw away my rifle and faced the brute. But as he sprang at me I caught him by the lower jaw with one hand and by the nose with the other. And there I stood and held his mouth wide open until he starved to death. A narrow escape, eh?--Exchange.

Old Seville.
Seville, one of the oldest cities of Spain, was a place of importance under Rome and later was the Moorish capital during the eleventh century. It was the country's chief commercial port when the new world was discovered and rose to great prosperity on profits from the Spanish main.

Calling the Children.
Don't shout at the children when they are out of doors and you wish them to come to the house. Call them with a small bell or whistle. The sound will go farther than the voice carries, and there will be no strain on the vocal cords.

"Why, certainly," replied the dignified matron. And she proceeded to count all the girls and call the roll. "Every one is here; no one is missing." "Then I feel very much relieved," replied the sly one, with a wink at the other girls. "I see by the morning paper that a human skeleton was found in the outskirts of this city."

There was a chorus of giggles from the girls, and the matron indignantly rapped for order.--Cincinnati Tribune.

Liszt and Leipzig.
After young Felix Weingartner had finished his work at the Leipzig conservatory he went, as was the fashion at that time, to present himself to Franz Liszt at Weimar. Now, Leipzig, conservative in music then, as it is today, had never received the works of Franz Liszt with sufficient warmth to please him. In fact, Leipzig had shown itself quite unfriendly toward his compositions, and the great master of the piano resented it. Weingartner was presented.

"Charmed," said Liszt. "Where have you studied?"
"At Leipzig, meinster," replied Weingartner.
"Leipzig, Leipzig?" said Liszt, as if he had difficulty in recalling the city, which, as a matter of fact, is only two or three hours away. "Oh, yes!" and the light of remembrance came into his eyes. "That's a fine place to take breakfast when you're on the way from here to Dresden."

Earliest School Books.
Among the discoveries in the archaeological excavations in ancient Babylon are some stone tablets believed to have been used as schoolbooks in the first regular school ever held in the world. They are in the collection of the University of Pennsylvania.

These prehistoric text books have marks proving that they were used in a school conducted in a temple in Nippur more than 2,500 years B. C. This school is known to have been in existence at least 1,000 years, and no records have yet been found to indicate the existence of any preceding it. The tablets contain notes upon several sciences, evidently made upon the stone surface by a stylus. Several of them contain two forms of characters, indicating that the pupils attempted to copy the work of the teacher.

His Narrow Escape.
First Traveler--So you have returned from Africa? Have any narrow escapes?
Second Traveler--Only one--a regular prize winner, I should think.

First Traveler--Let me hear it.
Second Traveler--Well, I was chased by a lion, and, having no cartridges left, I threw away my rifle and faced the brute. But as he sprang at me I caught him by the lower jaw with one hand and by the nose with the other. And there I stood and held his mouth wide open until he starved to death. A narrow escape, eh?--Exchange.

Old Seville.
Seville, one of the oldest cities of Spain, was a place of importance under Rome and later was the Moorish capital during the eleventh century. It was the country's chief commercial port when the new world was discovered and rose to great prosperity on profits from the Spanish main.

Calling the Children.
Don't shout at the children when they are out of doors and you wish them to come to the house. Call them with a small bell or whistle. The sound will go farther than the voice carries, and there will be no strain on the vocal cords.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, D. C., May 30.—El Arish, one of the world's forgotten places until the English bombarded it a few days ago, is the subject of a war geography bulletin, issued today by the National Geographic Society from its Washington headquarters, which says:

"With its large square fort and battlemented walls, El Arish presents a much more formidable and imposing appearance, viewed from the Mediterranean to the north and from the Desert el-Tih to the south, than its importance has warranted in recent years. Formerly a populous trading place for the numerous caravans following the 'short desert route' from Egypt to Syria, its trade was ruined materially since the completion of modern railway connections with Jaffa, Port Said and Alexandria. The town belongs to the empire of the Wadai-el-Arish, a desert which becomes a small town with a hundred miles southwest of Jerusalem and a slightly shorter distance from the Suez Canal, which lies to the west.

"The recent hostilities in this area revive a host of historical associations dating as far back as the time of the Pharaohs when this town was a place of exile for political prisoners, its ancient name being Khinokhura. Its present name is supposed to be derived from the custom which obtained here of 'cutting off the noses' of malefactors whose death sentences had been commuted. "Some thirty miles to the east of El Arish, on the Egyptian-Syrian boundary, lies ancient Rhapsia, now called Er-Rafa, where Josephus tells us that the Roman conqueror Titus made his first stop on his march against Jerusalem. Here also Sargon overwhelmed the Egyptians in the eighth century before the Christian era, and five hundred years later there was fought on the same sands the famous battle between Ptolemy Philopator and Antiochus, when the charging elephants of both armies played such a spectacular role. Of these great beasts, which had been introduced into Syrian and Greek warfare after Alexander's conquests in India, much was expected. The battle opened with a trumpeting clash of the opposing armoured mountains of flesh. Ptolemy's forces, comprising 73 of the terror-inspiring chargers while Antiochus sent into the fray 102. With the first onslaught practically all of Ptolemy's elephants were captured, yet he won the day.

"El Arish fell before Napoleon's Egyptian army in September, 1798, the credit for the city's fall being given to France's great general, Kleber, commander of the vanguard which also seized Jaffa and Gaza. It was during this campaign that Napoleon committed the great atrocity at Jaffa, shooting those prisoners whom he could neither guard nor feed, yet whom he feared to release. After Napoleon's departure Kleber concluded a convention at El Arish with the English admiral Sir William Smith, whereby the French were to be allowed to capitulate and were to receive safe transport back to France. This agreement was revoked by Lord Keith, however. Whereupon Kleber with 10,000 men marched to Haifa, and administered a crushing defeat to the Turks who outnumbered him six to one. Had not a fanatic assassinated the great French tactician on the day that Napoleon won the battle of Marengo, the fate of French arms in Egypt might have been different.

"The Admiral Smith whose agreement with Kleber was disallowed, was the same British officer who had caused the signal defeat of Napoleon before the walls of Acre, a relief work for which a grateful parliament voted him an annuity of a thousand pounds.

"In the center of the town of El Arish is a granite wall with an inscription in hieroglyphics, perpetuating a curious legend about the Egyptian god Shu. A short distance beyond the walls the traveler is shown the ruins of the building in which Baldwin I, one of the Crusader kings of Jerusalem, died in 1118, after an unsuccessful attack on Egypt."

MOHONK LAKE.

Mohonk Lake, May 29.—The Mohonk sewing circle met the past week with Mrs. A. J. Rutherford. The afternoon was largely taken up with the election of officers as follows: Mrs. H. C. Phillips, president; Mrs. Fred Rice, vice president; and Mrs. Benj. Heimer, secretary and treasurer. After the election of officers they adjourned reporting a pleasant afternoon.

Rev. Mr. Danegremond of High Falls is conducting Friday evening services in the employees' sitting room. Without doubt the pastor's sermons are appreciated by all.

The Mohonk baseball team put in some hard practice the past week. Their real fast team will not be completed until the last part of June. Four of the most important players are not expected here until then. With the additional four or five players it would be quite reasonable to say that the average club of amateurs about this part of the country would find it very interesting to give them a chance to play for sport's sake to see who has the faster team.

Watson Steen of Allgerville has taken over a considerable part of the outside athletic duties such as to see that these places are in condition for use. Under his instructions he has the bowling alleys, boat wharf, swimming places, tennis courts and other places of the same.

Mrs. Derrick Irwin of this place is spending a few days with friends in the valley.

David Owl of Springfield, Mass., will return to this place about June 16 to take up his usual duties in and about the post office.

Louis Silverman of Kingston is expected to take up his new duties at this place about June 20.

Mrs. Harry Delamater of this place is expected home from her visit some day this week.

MENKE'S DAILY
SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, May 30.—Stanley
Ketchel was killed nearly six years ago, yet since that time not one middleweight fighter in the world has proven himself a worthy successor.

Six years have come and gone—
and the middleweight throne still remains vacant. The fighting world is full of claimants for the kinging job—but they are nothing but pre-tenders. There isn't a fighter in the 158 pound division who seems a worthy successor—who is a champion in every sense of the word implies.

Many Claimed Title.

Once upon a time—during the era closely following Ketchel's death—the pugilistic woods were cluttered up with likely looking middleweights. But most of them faded or dropped into oblivion entirely before they ever reached the heights attained by the wonderful Polish battler.

Almost as soon as Ketchel was laid in his grave, a dozen men jumped to the fore and laid claim to his title. That of Billy Papke was a quite generally recognized—for a time. Billy once was the champion, due to the fact that he had beaten Ketchel. But Papke soon
shot the chutes. In the meantime,
Frank Klaus, Jim Flynn, Leo Houck,
Jack (Twin) Sullivan, Dave Smith,
Willie Lewis, Sailor Burke, Bob
Mohr, Marty Rowan, Joe Thomas, Jim Smith chorused claims for the championship.

Some of that squad were good fighters—but not great. None showed much superiority over the others. Within a year or two it was proven conclusively to fandom that not one of that outfit was really fit
to be a king.

New Crop No Better.

And then along came a new era of battlers—Mike Gibbons, George
(Knockout) Brown, Eddie McGoorty,
Battling Levinsky, Jack Dillon,
George Chip, and a flock of others.
Of the lot, Dillon was greatest. But the "Bearcat" quickly outgrew that class. Levinsky cut a wide swath battling as a middle for a time, but he, too, bulked into the heavyweight division. Brown never was a great fighter. McGoorty had risen to great heights and looked like the one best choice for the championship. Then he went to Australia, met Les Darcy
—and suffered a brace of beatings which sent him down—and still down.

And this brings us to Darcy. In Australia the claim he is the greatest middleweight developed in the past ten years. Mebbe—and mebbe
not. In Australia they grow very very enthusiastic about home products. Oftentimes they have discovered a "wonder." Said "wonders" eventually journeyed to America—and the "wonders" ceased.
The same thing may happen concerning Darcy. It's one thing for a fighter to gain a great reputation in his home land, with home crowds, home referees and other "homey"
things; it is another thing to uphold that reputation on foreign soil, before foreign crowds and with a foreign referee doing the work.

Darcy a Question.

Darcy's victories over Brown and McGoorty, on the face of things, stamp him as a great fighter. But beating up Brown is a job that many dubs have turned with ease. An American sportsman, who saw the second Darcy-McGoorty scrap in Australia, tells us that Darcy got all the best of the refereeing. Which may partially alibi for Eddie.

And so, the Darcy claim to the championship is not a real one until
he is put to the test—a few fights in the U. S. A. against some of the best middleweights on these shores.
P. S.—Oh, yes, now that you mention it, there is a fighter named Al-
McCoy. And he lives in Brooklyn.
Likewise he claims the title because he bored a fluke knockout over George Chip. Al probably is the middleweight champion of Brooklyn—but that's about the only place where his claim is recognized. But Brooklyn is only Brooklyn.

Today is the crucial test in the Giants' winning streak. With 17
straight now in hand they must face
Alexander the Great. If they can hurdle the Phillies' star they bid fair to set a new mark for consecutive wins.

The Giants, like President Wilson, believe in the lucky "13." When they come back to their own ballpark next Friday they will play their 13th game at home.

Walter Johnson almost got nicked
by the Athletics. A ninth inning rally enabled the Nationals to make
the game a tie.

The world champions staged a
come-back against the Yanks and applied the whitewash brush thickly.

The Tigers and Browns split a couple of swatfests.

The Dodgers refused to be tamed
and came back home today as they left on their trip—in first place.

The Pirates were forced to bow to the Reds in another ninth inning battling bee.

Exciting Game at Schoenag's.

On Sunday afternoon at Schoenag's the Eddyville baseball team was defeated by the Hennigan A. C. of Saugerties, the game being interesting for eight innings, as neither team scored. Hennigan A. C. had one man to reach second during the eight innings and Eddyville had one man to reach third. Moore, pitching for Saugerties, held Eddyville to four hits, while Stetzel for Eddyville fared as well, with only five for Saugerties.
The winning runs were made in the ninth, when Stetzel passed one and with one hit and two wild throws they scored three runs. Score by innings:

STUPID PLAYS AMUSE

Play in Central Association Described by Ned Egan.

More Mistakes Made in Minors in Week Than in Big Leagues in
Whole Season—Three-Base
Hit Counts for Single.

According to Ned Egan, "the 'Connie Mack of the Minors,' more 'bonehead' plays are made in class C and D leagues in a week than you see in the big leagues in a season. Egan describes a play made in the Central association that kept the circuit amused
for several days.

Waterloo was playing at Muscatine,
and Wetzel, Muscatine's right fielder,
was on first base, and Sours of the same team at bat. Sours gave the hit-
and-run signal and Wetzel started down for second base as soon as the pitcher began to wind up. Sours hit a long fly. Just as he reached second base Wetzel thought he saw Hill,
Waterloo's left fielder, reaching up to catch the ball.

Without waiting to see whether the fielder made the catch, Wetzel raced back to first base. Meantime the ball had soared high over Hill's head and Sours turned first base and raced for second. Wetzel passed him at full speed, going in the opposite direction.
When Sours reached second he thought that he had made a mistake about seeing the ball fall safely, and started back to first. Simultaneously
Wetzel saw Hill chasing the sphere,
and he again began the dash for second, and once more both players
passed each other on the dead run, both badly confused. The result was that a hit that should have been good for a triple and a score went for a single.

And all this happened without the umpire being entangled in the "bonehead" play.

THIRD BASE EASIEST
TO STEAL, SAY STARS

"Ty" Cobb, king of base stealers, and "Buck" Herzog, veteran infielder, believe that third base is the easiest cushion to steal. "Ty's" reason for thinking so is that runners can take a bigger lead off second than off
any other sack. "Buck" says
the runner is helped by the fact that the third sacker must take the ball at a hard angle and
the runner has more room in which to slide around him.

DEVORE DELIGHTS IN STORY

Catcher Toff, Appointed Umpire in Eastern League, Announces Batteries in Novel Way.

Next to the story about McGraw telling him that he had three deaf men
and 18 dummies on the Giants, Josh Devore delights in telling the one about Catcher Jack Toff. After being released by Toronto, Toff was appointed an umpire in the then Eastern league and his first assignment happened to be in the Canadian city where he had formerly played. Taking the megaphone to announce the batteries, Toff shouted: "Mueller and Stanage for Newark; Rudolph and McKinley for us!"

anywhere from 350 to 400 and his big drop last season, when he hit for 308, was a surprise. Many believe that Joseph will never regain his place among the batting leaders of the diamond, but Jackson is a great natural hitter and it may be that he merely suffered from a batting slump last year.

FOUR THOUSAND MARCH IN PREPAREDNESS PARADE

Huge Crowd Sees Monster Memorial Day Parade and Preparedness Demonstration, the Biggest Parade by Citizens of Kingston Ever Given Here.

Memorial Day in Kingston was marked by the biggest parade of citizens in the history of the city and one of the largest holiday crowds which has ever come here. The parade was the big feature of the day, and a careful estimate of the number of men in line places the number at more than four thousand, which is as large a number as Kingston parades have contained, and is larger than any former parade made up almost exclusively of residents of Kingston.

Graves Decorated Early.

The graves of the veterans of the War of the Rebellion, the Revolutionary soldiers and Spanish War veterans were decorated by school children at an early hour. The pupils who decorated the graves met at their respective school houses at eight o'clock and were escorted by details appointed by Pratt Post, No. 127, G. A. R. and Colonial Camp, No. 75, Spanish War Veterans, who escorted the boys to the corner of Broadway and Pine Grove avenue. The school girls, in charge of their teachers, marched to the nearest trolley lines and cars provided by the Kingston Consolidated Railroad Company carried them free of charge to Broadway and Pine Grove avenue, whence most of them and the boys of the schools marched to Wiltwyck Cemetery, where the larger number of veterans' graves are located. Montrose Cemetery, St. Peter's Cemetery, St. Mary's Cemetery, and Mount Zion Cemetery were by no means neglected, but at each cemetery the graves of the veterans were decorated.

The Dead Remembered.

All of the cemeteries presented a finer appearance than in any previous year and the floral decorations were more artistic although not as elaborate as in years when weather conditions have brought outdoor flowering plants to full bloom by this time of year. The present backward season has prevented many people making use of flowering plants and shrubs whose blossoms usually are found in abundance by Memorial Day, and florists' flowers substituted. Nightfall of Monday found all of the cemeteries with hundreds of graves decorated by families in memory of those who have died, and the addition of bouquets early this morning by families and by the school children made veritable bowers of the resting places of the dead.

Hundreds of Visitors Here.

The influx of visitors exceeded all expectations. Most of them came by automobile for the express purpose of witnessing the parade and afterward went touring in the country. A large number of automobilists on their way to and from the Catskills for the day remained in town until after the parade. Visiting automobile parties began arriving in town early Monday evening and all the hotels were filled to their capacity Monday night.

The Big Parade.

The parade started promptly at ten o'clock, when ten taps on the fire alarm gave the signal. Before that time all the organizations taking part had marched to the streets to which they had been assigned, and were escorted to their place in line by details of Company M. The line of march was from the city hall up Broadway to Albany avenue, thence around the Academy triangle and countermarching on Broadway to McEntee street, to Wurts street, to Rogers street, to Broadway and thence countermarching again on Broadway to the city hall, where the parade disbanded.

The order of march was somewhat changed from the original plan as

published, but the formation of the divisions was carried out.

Heading the parade came a squad of the New York aqueduct police from Brown's Station, and they received a hearty ovation. The mounts of the patrolmen were in fine fettle and they almost kept time to the music. Behind the patrolmen were Major Chandler, grand marshal of the parade, who was given hearty applause along the entire line of march, and his staff, consisting of Captain W. J. Cranston of Company M, County Judge Jenkins, Kenneth Archer and Ferd Gilderleeve.

The first division, headed by William R. Kraft and Roger H. Loughran, was led by the Colonial Band of forty pieces with Prof. George H. Muller as leader, and Company M. The military organization made the best appearance it has ever made in any parade and the appreciation of the spectators everywhere was manifested by applause as the guardsmen passed.

Seventeen automobiles contained the Civil War veterans, each of whom carried an American flag. There was not the applause for the veterans which there usually is when they appear in parades, but the silence was a mark of the deep respect of everyone for the survivors of the ranks which formerly were well filled when the veterans marched in former Memorial Day parades. The ranks have been decimated rapidly in the past few years and nobody who saw the parades of former years could fail to observe the difference in their number and appearance.

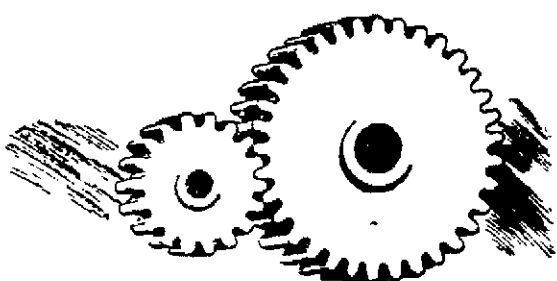

Boy Scouts Make a Hit.

The Boy Scouts, who came next, received the biggest ovation of any organization in line, and nobody begrudged it to them. The applause was continuous and spontaneous. The boys marched with the arm-tread of seasoned veterans, and their attention was not distracted for an instant by any amount of applause from the ranks of the spectators who lined the sidewalks along the entire route. The Boy Scout movement was brought forcibly home to many a man on the sidewalk, and people who have paid but little attention to the Scouts and what they are doing found themselves more interested in the boys than ever before.

Warm Welcome for High School Students.

Next to the warmth of the reception accorded to the Boy Scouts was that given to the high school students, who were led by Garibaldi Band of Albany. Superintendent Michael and the members of the board of education led the division composed of the boys of the high school and the citizens. There was applause for the officials of the education system of the city, but the boys' appearance was the signal for a demonstration which began when they started to march and continued until they finished. With but little preliminary training, the boys marched in good order and displayed an ability to take care of themselves on parade equal to their ability to make good within the school room.

The civic division, which was started originally as a preparedness demonstration, turned out nearly a thousand men, all of whom marched with American flags. First in the civic section, which followed the high school students, came the lawyers of the city, behind whom marched the doctors, wearing the Red Cross on their arms. Behind them came business men, bankers, factory employers and employees, salesmen and scores of others whose organizations did not take part in the parade.

in a body. From every point of view, the Citizens' Corps was a success and it ranked third in the amount of applause received along the line of march.

Uniformed Civic Organizations.

Of the civic organizations which appeared in uniform, those which attracted the most attention were the Uniformed Rank of the Junior Order United American Mechanics and the Fourth Degree Assembly Knights of Columbus. The former carried rifles and the latter carried swords. The uniform of the Mechanics is of a military type, while that of the Knights of Columbus consisted of frock coats, with sashes and silk hats. Behind the uniformed bodies of each organization marched the members of the order who have not yet passed through the higher degrees of membership.

Minnevaska Tribe, No. 134, I. O. R. M., and Wawarung Tribe, No. 323, I. O. R. M., appeared in their traditional Red men's costume and attracted much attention and applause. Their accoutrements were in strong keeping with the early traditions of Kingston, and Colonial scenes were readily re-enacted in the imagination as spectators recalled the days when real red men marched along paths which now form the streets over which today's parade passed. Minnevaska Tribe carried the largest American flag in the parade, 25 men being required to carry it.

Firemen Receive Applause.

The volunteer fire organizations of the city which took part in the parade fully merited the enthusiasm with which they were received. Excelsior Hose Company, led by the firemen's division, whose other companies were Wiltwyck Hose Company, the Central Hook and Ladder Company, Rapid Hose Company and Union Hose Company. The companies marched without their apparatus but were greeted with an enthusiasm and effectiveness attesting their popularity.

Odd Fellows Had Large Turnout.

The Odd Fellows of Kingston had the largest division of any organization in line. There were members of Kosciuszki Lodge, Arctas Lodge, United German Lodge, Kingston Lodge and C. S. Clay Lodge, and they presented a fine appearance. The Odd Fellows, with the Loyal Order of the Moose and Patriotic Order Sons of America formed the last division of the parade, and it was well worth while standing along the line of march to wait for their appearance.

Other organizations which did not turn out such large numbers but which made an excellent appearance were the Knights of Pythias and United Commercial Travelers, the latter of whom marched with the vigor and experience of veterans acquired not only through military training but in walking long distances in the pursuit of business.

Flags Carried in Line.

Half a dozen of the organizations carried huge American flags, spread flat, and everywhere the emblem of patriotism was greeted with applause.

The police arrangements for the parade were perfect. Trolley traffic was suspended on Broadway during the parade, and automobiles were not allowed to park except on side streets. From their position on the side streets the auto horns honked their welcome and greeting to the paraders, and particular salutes for particular organizations at times made a din that could be heard for many blocks.

All the bands in the parade fully measured up to the high standard expected of them, and there was unstinted praise for all of them. The music was more of a military character than it usually is, and indicated the return to popularity of strictly military marches.

As a demonstration in favor of preparedness, as well as an observance by Kingston citizens of Memorial Day, the parade was a complete success, and to the thousands who paraded and to the various committees which have worked unceasingly for the success of the parade the thanks of the entire city are due.

Preparedness in Practice.

A most praiseworthy feature of the parade and a novelty that everyone appreciated was that it started on time and ended on time. It had been announced by Mayor Chandler that the parade would start at 10 o'clock and would take two hours to go over the line of march, and both of these announcements were made good to the minute. The parade started precisely at 10 and the end of it arrived at the city hall just as the fire bells were sounding the two taps for noon. As an example of preparedness and precision the management of the parade cannot be too highly commended.

Absent-Mindedness. Our intellect follows our interest. And to concentrate on any subject we must find or create some real interest in it. The creative minds of the world—inventors, composers, artists, even industrial magnates—are so absorbed in their ideas and ambitions that they seem "absent" to persons without ideas or ambitions.

HUGE CROWD TO HEAR CONGRESSMAN WARD

Memorial Day Exercises at the City Hall Attended by a Multitude of Interested and Appreciative People--Addresses by Congressman Ward and the Hon. William E. Thorpe.

Several thousand people were gathered on city hall grounds by the time the parade had commenced and broken ranks, the speakers and their escort proceeding to the stand at the east end, where the members of the Grand Army were seated.

Mayor Canfield opened the exercises with the introduction of the Rev. W. F. Stowe, pastor of the Reformed Church of the Comforter, who made the prayer. Then followed a reading of Lincoln's Address at Gettysburg by the Rev. F. W. Moot, of the Ponckhockie Union Church.

Congressman Charles R. Ward was then introduced and spoke in part as follows:

It is very fitting indeed that the people of this old and historic city of Kingston meet here today with such an abundance of patriotism to pay tribute to the living and dead of the Grand Army of the Republic. The people of the city of Kingston and of Ulster county can well be proud of their history. Ulster county has been closely identified with the history of our government and of the state of New York since that history began. The first governor of the state of New York and later vice-president of the United States, General George Clinton, who with his brother fought so valiantly in the revolution, was an Ulster county man. Away back in the year 1683 Ulster county sent her delegates to the colonial assembly, her men fought and played a very important part in the war for independence. Again in the hour of trouble when the great Lincoln called for volunteers to defend the flag and preserve the union the sons of Ulster county responded heroically to the call--and if I understand correctly the manifestation of patriotism I have witnessed here today, if the time should ever come again when our country should need the services of defenders Ulster county will render the same account of herself that history has recorded to her illustrious past.

Along the journey of life there are times when we pause for a moment to honor and to express our tribute to those by whose courage and by whose sacrifice we have benefited. Of such times none is more firmly fixed in the heart of the American people than in Memorial Day. Today, a nation pays homage to those patriots who back in the dark days of 1862-65 fought and died that their country might live. Today we may strew the soldiers' grave with flowers, the tokens of our esteem; we may pronounce the eulogies, so well deserved, but we do not pay full honor to the men living and dead of the Grand Army of the Republic unless we do our full duty as American citizens in time of peace as the men of the Grand Army so nobly did their duty in time of war. As we look back over the years and see what has been done for us, so far as we are concerned, we must look into the future and do what lies in our power to do for our children and our children's children. As our ancestors have provided for us we must provide for our posterity. By the sacrifice of blood the Grand Army has handed down to our generation a land and a government, a priceless heritage. It is our sacred duty to hand down to the generation that follows us that same heritage with its foundations unshaken and its framework enriched by the wonderful progress and development of the years.

The growth of our country has been the wonder of the world. The first federal census was taken in the year 1790 to determine the federal ratio or the number of men that could be elected to sit in congress. The ratio was then fixed at one in every thirty thousand; now it is one in over one hundred and thirty thousand. The first census showed we had a population of less than four million; it showed also that practically the whole body of people lived along the Atlantic coast and on a strip of land about two hundred and fifty miles wide. On the average our population has increased 100 per cent every five years, and today our people number one hundred million. The first steam railroad built in this country in 1825 ran between Baltimore and Ellicott's Mills, a distance of fourteen miles. Today in the state of New York alone the railroad mileage is more than eight thousand and that of the country more than two hundred thousand. Less than one hundred years ago, back in 1825, Henry Clay, the father of the national road, and President Monroe were congratulating themselves on seeing a national road--the route of the immigrant--built from Maryland through to the Mississippi.

Today thousands upon thousands are traveling on the two million miles of public roads in the United States. It is easy to perceive what progress this enormous building of railroads and highways is indicative of. The Boston News Letter, a weekly paper published in 1794, was the first regular newspaper in the United States, and today, as everyone knows, there are more newspapers and periodicals published in the United States than anywhere in the world. Besides our vast system of schools, where more than eighteen million children receive instruction at the expense of the government, our higher institutions of learning, both public and private, have an enrollment of more than 350,000 and are conceded among the best in the world. Even before the present war had piled up the appalling debt of the belligerent nations we were far ahead of any nation in wealth, our wealth at that time being estimated at $150,000,000,000 or $150,000,000,000 greater than Great Britain and Ireland and $60,000,000,000 greater than Germany. Since the taking of our first federal census one hundred and twenty-six years ago we have grown from a tottering dependency to the greatest nation in the world. Looking over the history of our land we see nothing but progress, honorably, nobly, in the path of integrity and in the light of freedom we have striven to our present day prominence and power. Today we Americans can look upon our country--the one great nation of the world whose resources are not being sapped by the heavy penalty of war and whose people bear the insignia of peace and industry rather than that of war and waste. From ocean to ocean, over the broad expanse of our continent, we see humanity at its best in peace, industry and freedom.

CONGRESSMAN WARD.

We see the workmen in the shop and the farmer in the field and with every strike of the hammer and with every turn of the plow we see our country looking bigger, greater and mightier. We must bear in mind that with our greatness there comes a commensurate degree of responsibility. We must bear the responsibility of our standard of citizenship, for the conservation of our natural resources, for the safety and protection of our own countrymen at home and abroad; for the carrying on of our diplomatic relations in a manner consistent with their vast and growing importance; responsibility for the purity of our fountains of justice and responsibility for the wisdom of our laws and customs in the making. It is our profound duty to keep steadfast and inviolable those fundamental principles in the constitution of the United States, the greatest written instrument of government ever devised, and to uphold that high idealism of equality and justice, the very life blood of true democracy.

This occasion today instills the good old fashioned patriotism. It brings to our minds the noble struggles of the past, as we see the venerable men here who took part in them. It makes us proud that we are Americans. It makes us give expression to that sentiment that "America first, last and always." It is not in our power to foresee what trials may confront us in the future. Time goes on and the happenings in the world strike here and there. But through tranquility or through trial, success must follow the people who are steadfast to the ideals of true American citizenship. We can not honor the men of the Grand Army more than by maintaining as best we know how the country they once fought to preserve and did preserve. We can all, with mutual sympathy, dedicate our purposes to the end that whatever may be in the path of our destiny as a nation, the principles of liberty, union and equality among men--so close to the hearts of the men who we honor today--will be perpetuated and let our inspiring trust be that the service and glory of our nation in the past will now be in the recognition to the towering achievements of the future.

The congressman's speech was heartily applauded. He was followed by the Hon. William E. Thorpe of Catskill, Greene county, who said he did not come to lend a bit of color to the occasion but just to give a straightforward talk upon the Grand Army. His sacrifices and services. The speaker said he had tested the baseness of Kingston pavements with the rest of the parade. In closing he pictured the feelings of the surviving members of the Grand Army as they listened to the strains of "Marching Through Georgia" and other war time songs. He recalled some of the sanguinary struggles of the Civil War, spoke of the mounds that marked the pathway of the Union Army and of the fact that the Grand Army never complained.

"These are the men," declared the speaker, "who made this flag and this country what it is today. There are those who say that the pen is mightier than the sword, but God give me the army and the navy when the time comes. I don't want to run any chances on fighting an enemy with a typewriter!"

Applause interrupted the speaker at this point and frequently through the remainder of his speech in which he paid tributes to the old soldiers, and declared that what they fought for was a priceless heritage to which citizenship of today should dedicate itself that the flag and the principles handed down to us may be kept as sacred and as untarnished as when handed over by the men in blue. "Today we citizens of this great nation pause to pay homage to them; today we stop the machinery of life to give our thanks to the men who preserved for us this heritage, the sweetest that ever can be given to man on earth, the spirit of freedom, the like of which is known to no other civilized nation upon this earth. "I believe in preparedness, these men believed in preparedness, the city of Kingston believes in preparedness as shown by the manifestation here. Across yonder is your high school, it too means preparedness of future generations. The greatest lesson that the lives and the devotion of the Grand Army is over to be prepared to make any sacrifice, to be ready at all times to defend the heritage of

To Avoid Colds.
In brief, if you wish to be absolutely immune from colds of all kinds, and their more serious sequences, here is the recipe: Eat abstemiously of non-stimulating food. Fast occasionally. Avoid table salt, woolen underclothing and foul air, and harden the body by exposure to the air and sun, and occasionally to cold water.

The Word Gaiters.
Episcopal gaiters cannot date from a very remote antiquity. The very word "gaiters" is almost a newcomer to the language. Johnson's Dictionary does not recognize its existence. It does not occur before 1750, and even in 1802 a military dictionary had to define it as "a sort of spatterdash." "Gaiter," however, the French original, goes back at least to the fifteenth century, and the origin of that is lost, though etymologists compare all sorts of words in all sorts of languages, including an old German word for a baby's christening cloth. The one certainty is that gaiters have nothing to do with gait in spite of the punning line in the "Rejected Addresses"--"Lax in their gaiters, lax in their gait."--London Spectator.

Why We Have Two Eyes.
Because we have two eyes the things we see seem solid and not flat, with the result that we can judge their distance from us with fair correctness. Look through a window at a house across the street with one eye closed and then with the other eye closed. The bars of the window frame will cut across the opposite house in different places. The two fields seen with the eyes separately, although in the main alike, differ. When you look at the house with both eyes open the two fields seen by the two eyes are combined and the house across the street assumes depth and relief. Although we see a house with each eye, we see only one house with both eyes. This makes the stereoscope possible--an instrument so designed that the two eyes are made to converge on a single point and get to see two different pictures. If these two pictures represent a chair as it would appear to the right and left eyes respectively they are perceived as one solid object. Popular Science Monthly.

Shrewd Father.
"So you've decided to name your boy after George Washington?"
"Yes, you see, George has been dead a long time, and so many boys have been named after him who never amounted to anything that our son won't be conspicuous if he disappoints our fondest hopes and fails to become great."--Birmingham Age-Herald.

In Modern Times.
"In the old days the main element of a soldier was to know how to act under fire."
"And nowadays, in addition, he is supposed to know how to act under water in the earth and without air."--Puck.

Sociability.
"I hope you are not of those men who go home and find fault with the dinner."
"No," answered Mr. Growcher, "my wife and I eat at a restaurant where we can both find fault."--Washington Star.

A Wish.
"I wish success were a woman."
"Why?"
"Then everybody would know its sex."--Detroit Free Press.

Old Saville.
Saville, one of the oldest cities of Spain, was a place of importance under Rome and later was the Moorish capital during the eleventh century. It was the country's chief commercial port when the new world was discovered and rose to great prosperity on profits from the Spanish main.

Calling the Children.
Don't shout at the children when they are out of doors and you want them to come to the house. Call them with a small bell or whistle. The sound will go farther than the voice carries, and there will be no sound in the vocal cords.

During the French revolution, in the midst of the reign of terror, when crowds of condemned nobles were being hurried to the guillotine, a number of tumbrils (two wheeled carts) drew up in front of the Conciergerie prison for victims. They were filled, all but one, for which it was reserved for persons intended for the guillotine. The driver was about to move away, thinking that he was not needed, when a young man was led out and placed in his cart.

"Driver," said the condemned man, "if you will permit me to escape and I succeed in getting out of France I will give you 100,000 francs. I am the Marquis de Fontaigny. Our family long ago deposited a fortune in England."

"What good would 100,000 francs do me without my head?" was the reply. "They would guillotine me in your place."

"Leave France with me. Think of the fortune you will gain. Have you a sweetheart? Fancy the little home you can make with her."

The man began to lag farther behind the other tumbrils, which in the start had got away before him. Presently he drew rein and, getting down from his seat, pretended to fix the harness. When the other carts had passed almost out of sight he got up again and drove on till, coming to a narrow side street, he turned into it at the same time reaching back with one hand and cutting the rope that bound the prisoner's hands.

"Get up on the seat beside me," the marquis in his anxiety to escape death was about to jump out of the cart, but the driver stopped him. When they were side by side he told the marquis to take off his coat and throw it down into the cart, and taking off his own waistcoat--he wore no coat--he gave it to the marquis to put on. Then, taking a clay pipe from his pocket, he put it in the marquis' mouth. All this was done, scarcely a person noticing it, in a few moments. Then the two drove on as if they were of the same rank in life and but on an ordinary purpose. Fontaigny took care to play his part well.

"Monsieur," said the driver, "I want no pay for what I am doing. I am tired of driving people to their death and will go away with you if we can elude those who are expected to catch us. Our success will depend upon the luck we have in not being soon missed. But let us take no chances as to that."

With the last words he drove the cart into an entrance to a court behind a grocer's shop. Then both he and the marquis got down and, seeing an open door, entered it and, passing through a passageway, came to the rear of another shop opening on another street.

They had scarcely turned the cart into the court when a mounted soldier galloped past the entrance and hurried on down the street.

Before reaching the barrier they procured some more coarse clothing for the marquis by trading with an overgrown youth for his worn breeches, shoes and hat, for they knew that at the gateway through which they were to pass they would be liable to inspection.

Several citizen soldiers were looking about. The teamster as they approached talked volubly to the marquis, as though he was not thinking of anything except the subject that interested him. When he came to the gate, pretending not to see the guard, he was ordered to halt. He looked up as though awakened from a dream.

"Well," he said, "what will you?"

"Who are you, and where are you going?"

"I am a teamster and am going beyond the barrier to contract for some fodder for my horses."

"And you?" to the marquis.

"I assist him in his stables."

"You don't look like a stableman."

After some further questions they were permitted to pass.

The nearest border for them was Belgium. Once out of Paris, they turned northward and began a journey over the route that many an emigre of the revolution had traveled before them, only, instead of keeping to a main road, they deviated from one as much as possible. The marquis' companion, who gave him the name of Antoine Boyer, proved by far the better strategist of the two, and it was due to his well laid plans and cool head that they succeeded in escaping suspicion.

Since the marquis was in company with one of common origin and in a commoner's clothing, it was not difficult for them to get on without exciting attention. The main feature of their escape was in the beginning, there being no clew to what had become of them. In due time they reached the border, and it was not long before the young marquis was embraced by his widowed mother, who, having learned of his arrest, had given up for lost.

Fontaigny gave the man to whom he owed his life the promised reward. Antoine had a sweetheart and commented that the money should be settled on her for a dowry. Funds were sent to her, and she joined her lover in Brussels, where there was a wealthy graced by the presence of his family. Antoine decided to make Brussels his home, and Fontaigny insisted on providing capital with which he set up a shop suited to his station and abilities.

MURDEROUS ATTACK ON COL. ROOSEVELT

Kalfe Hurler at Him Misses the Colonel but Hits the Automobile He is Riding in.

By Telegraph to The Freeman. Kansas City, Mo., May 30.--A knife with a 4-inch blade was hurled at Col. Roosevelt as he rode along Grand avenue in his automobile this morning. The knife missed the colonel by inches. It struck the tonneau door behind which Roosevelt sat and fell to the running board of the car.

Ernest Schell, one of the American Legion guards, who accompanied the Roosevelt car, seized the knife and turned it over to the police. Chief of Police Hammill has a good description of the man who threw the knife but who forced his way back through the crowd and escaped before any among the hundreds who saw the act could stop him.

CAUSE OF SHADOWS.
And Why They Are Darker in the Night Than in the Daytime.

Where anything through which rays of light cannot pass intercepts the light rays coming from a luminous body the light rays are turned back in the direction from which they come and the part on the other side of the object which intercepted the light goes into shade and a shadow results.

A shadow then is produced by cutting off one or more light rays. We notice shadows when the sun is bright in the daytime and at night when we walk along the streets lighted partly by street lamps.

The shadows we see in the daytime are caused by our cutting off and throwing back some of the light rays which come from the sun. These are not so dark as the shadows we see at night because the rays of light from the sun are so bright and are reflected from so many other objects to the side and in back of us.

When, however, we are walking along a dimly lighted street and come to a street lamp the shadows our bodies cause are quite black. The night shadows are darker because the source of light is less intense and the objects to the side of and in back of us (if we are walking toward the light) do not reflect so much of the light rays as they do of the sun's rays in the daytime. Two Little Bills.
Robert was in the habit of expecting reward for every little service. At the end of the week he made out a "bill" to his mother and carefully laid it where her eyes would fall upon it. The items were as follows:

"Mother owes to Robert.
"Five cents for running errands.
"Five cents for being good."

That evening there appeared beside Robert's plate a paper upon which was written:

"Robert owes mother, for years of happiness, nothing; for nursing him through long illnesses, nothing; for doing good to him, nothing."

Thoroughly ashamed of himself, Robert ran to mother, threw his arms around her and sobbed:

"Mother, I will do everything I can for you after this, and I'll never ask you to give me anything but just love."

What Elsie Used to Mean.
An elopement has a very definite meaning in the English language of today. It is restricted by custom to a single meaning, that relating to the disappearance of a pair of sweethearts.

But an elopement in advertisements in eighteenth century newspapers meant the absconding of a slave.

"Elope" is a venerable Scandinavian word, and Eric the Red would be much surprised to know that he would not be eloping from his ship should he jump ashore on the New England coast today. In his day "elope" meant "to leap from."--Des Moines Register.

MENKE'S DAILY

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, May 30.—Stanley
Ketchel was killed nearly six years
ago, yet since that time not one middleweight fighter in the world has proven himself a worthy successor.

Six years have come and gone—
and the middleweight throne still remains vacant. The fighting world
is full of claimants for the kinging
job—but they are nothing but pre-tenders. There isn't a fighter in the 158 pound division who seems a worthy successor—who is a champion in every sense the word implies.

For a year or more, Mike Gibbons was hailed by many as the best man in the division. But happenings during the past eight or ten months have proven that Mike is not a champion; that he has been overrated greatly and is not, in any way, a logical successor of the great Ketchel.

Many Claimed Title.

Once upon a time—during the era
closely following Ketchel's death—the pugilistic woods were cluttered with likely looking middleweights. But most of them faded, or dropped into oblivion entirely, before they ever reached the heights attained by the wonderful Polish brawler.

Almost as soon as Ketchel was laid in his grave, a dozen men
jumped to the fore and laid claim to his title. That of Billy Papke's was quite generally recognized—for a time. Billy once was the champion, due to the fact that he had beaten Ketchel. But Papke soon
shot the chutes. In the meantime,
Frank Klaus, Jim Flynn, Leo Houck,
Jack (Twin) Sullivan, Dave Smith,
Willie Lewis, Sailor Burke, Bob
Molha, Marty Rowan, Joe Thomas, Jim Smith chorused claims for the championship.

Some of that squad were good fighters—but not great. None
showed much superiority over the others. Within a year or two it was proved conclusively to fandom that not one of that outfit was really fit
to be a king.

New Crop No Better.

And then along came a new era of battlers—Mike Gibbons, George
(Knockout) Brown, Eddie McGoorty,
Battling Levinsky, Jack Dillon,
George Chip, and a flock of others.
Of the lot, Dillon was greatest. But
the "Bearcat" quickly outgrew that class. Levinsky cut a wide swath battling as a middle for a time, but he, too, bulked into the heavyweight
division. Brown never was a great fighter. McGoorty had never to great heights and looked like the one best choice for the championship. Then
he went to Australia, met Les Darcy
—and suffered a brace of beatings,
which sent him down—and still
down.

And this brings us to Darcy. In Australia they claim he is the greatest middleweight developed in the past ten years. Mebbe—and mebbe
not. In Australia they grow very very enthusiastic about home products. Oftentimes they have discovered a "wonder." Said "wonders" eventually journeyed to London, and the "wonder" passed.

The same thing may happen concerning Darcy. It's one thing for a fighter to earn a great reputation in his home land, with home crowds,
home referee, and other "homey"
things. It is another thing to uphold
that reputation on foreign soil, before foreign crowds and with a foreign referee doing the work.

Darcy a Question.

Darcy's victories over Brown and McGoorty, on the face of things,
stamp him as a great fighter. But beating up Brown is a job that many dubs have turned with ease. An American sportsman, who saw the second Darcy-McGoorty scrap in Australia, tells us that Darcy got
all the best of the refereeing. Which may partially ally for Eddie.
And so, the Darcy claim to the championship is not a real one until
he is put to the test—a few fights in the U. S. A. against some of the best middleweights on these shores.

P. S.—Oh, yes, now that you mention it, there is a fighter named Al-
McGoy. And he lives in Brooklyn.
Likewise he claims the title because he bored a duke knockout over George Chip. Al probably is the middleweight champion of Brooklyn—but that's about the only place
where his claim is recognized. But Brooklyn is only Brooklyn.

Today is the crucial test in the Giant's winning streak. With 17
straight now in hand they must face
Alexander the Great. If they can hurdle the Phillies' star they did fair to set a new mark for consecutive wins.

The Giants, like President Wilson, believe in the lucky "13." When they come back to their own ballpark next Friday they will play their 13th game at home.

Walter Johnson almost got nicked
by the Athletics. A ninth inning rally enabled the Nationals to make
the game a tie.

The world champions staged a
come-back against the Yanks and applied the whitewash brush thickly.

The Tigers and Browns split a couple of swatfests.

The Dodgers refused to be tamed
and came back home today as they
left on their trip—in first place.

STUPID PLAYS AMUSE

Play in Central Association Described by Ned Egan.

Were Mistakes Made in Minors in Week Than in Big Leagues in
Whole Season—Three-Base
Hit Counts for Single.

According to Ned Egan, "the 'Connie Mack of the Minors,' more 'bone-
head' plays are made in class C and D
leagues in a week than you see in the big leagues in a season. Egan describes a play made in the Central association that kept the circuit amused
for several days.

Waterloo was playing at Muscatine,
and Wetzel, Muscatine's right fielder,
was on first base, and Sours of the same team at bat. Sours gave the hit-
and-run signal and Wetzel started
down for second base as soon as the pitcher began to wind up. Sours hit
a long fly. Just as he reached second base Wetzel thought he saw Hill,
Waterloo's left fielder, reaching up to catch the ball.

Without waiting to see whether the fielder made the catch, Wetzel raced
back to first base. Meantime the ball had soared high over Hill's head and Sours turned first base and raced for second. Wetzel passed him at full speed, going in the opposite direction.

When Sours reached second he thought that he had made a mistake
about seeing the ball fall safely, and started back to first. Simultaneously
Wetzel saw Hill chasing the sphere,
and he again began the dash for second, and once more both players
passed each other on the dead run,
both badly confused. The result was
that a hit that should have been good
for a triple and a score went for a single.

And all this happened without the umpire being entangled in the "bone-
head" play.

THIRD BASE EASIEST
TO STEAL, SAY STARS

"Ty" Cobb, king of base steal-
ers, and "Buck" Herzog, veteran infielder, believe that third
base is the easiest cushion to steal. "Ty's" reason for thinking so is that runners can take
a bigger lead off second than off
any other sack. "Buck" says
the runner is helped by the fact that the third sacker must take
the ball at a hard angle and
the runner has more room in which to slide around him.

DEVORE DELIGHTS IN STORY

Catcher Toff, Appointed Umpire in Eastern League, Announces Batteries in Novel Way.

Next to the story about McGraw
telling him that he had three deaf men
and 18 dummies on the Giants, Josh
Devore delights in telling the one
about Catcher Jack Toff. After being released by Toronto, Toff was appointed an umpire in the then Eastern
league and his first assignment happened to be in the Canadian city
where he had formerly played. Taking the megaphone to announce the batteries, Toff shouted: "Mueller and Stanage for Newark; Rudolph and Mc-Ginley for us!"

JACKSON IS NATURAL HITTER

White Sox Outfielder Hopes to Regain Old-Time Batting Stride During Present Season.

Joe Jackson did not hit up to his usual form last year, but hopes to strike his batting stride this year. Joe has banged the ball every season since he entered the ranks of the majors

Joe Jackson.

anywhere from .350 to .400 and his
big drop last season, when he hit for
.308, was a surprise. Many believe that Joseph will never regain his place among the batting leaders of the diamond, but Jackson is a great natural hitter and it may be that he merely suffered from a batting slump last
year.

Natural Gift.

Now comes somebody telling us that debates should be eliminated from female colleges. Oh, let 'em alone.
It is a natural gift, as men know who have married noncollege girls.—Hous-
